GEORGE V., PROCLAIMED KING, BEGINS RULE OVER BRITAIN

Roosevelt Named to Represent America at Edward's Funeral

STEAD DRAWS A PEN PICTURE OF NEW KING; 'DIGESTION VERY BAD'

English Journalist Calls George Fifth a Violent Partisan and Worthless as an Electoral Asset in Present Crisis,

BRUSQUE AND VERY EASILY IRRITATED AT MERE TRIFLES

By WILLIAM T. STEAD.

Special Commissioner of the Boston American in London.

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

LONDON, May 7.—Today all men are talking and thinking of nothing else but the late King, whose sudden though expected death has had a stunning effect upon the public mind. But to-morrow the people will begin to ask what effect the demise of the crown will have upon the constitutional crisis.

An ardent Conservative with whom I was discussing the matter today said he calculated the death of King Edward would cost the Unionist party thirty seats in the coming general election. This calculation is based upon the fact that the Unionists were hoping to exploit the popularity of King Edward as an electoral asset against the party which was putting pressure on him to coerce the House of Lords.

That asset is now lost. King George is worthless as an electoral asset. He has no personal popularity. Indeed, if the truth be told, he has a good deal of personal unpopularity. He is neither tactful nor genial. He is very opinionated and somewhat brusque. George has none of his father's prestige nor the experience of his grandmother.

And, what is perhaps more serious still, he has absolutely an abominable digestion. The slightest indiscretion in eating or drinking causes his hands to become cold and his lips to turn livid. Uneasy lies the head that wears the crown, but uneasy indeed is the monarch whose digestive apparatus is liable to go out of order at a moment's notice.

King George Is Violent Partisan

George has not only to contend with the disadvantage of his comparative youth, inexperience and ill-health. He has the misfortune to be violently partisan. Of course he may shed this, now that he has ascended the throne. But as the Prince of Wales he made no secret of his ardent sympathy with the tariff reformers. This, of course, has put him out of court as an impartial umpire between the parties.

The chances are, therefore, that if there should be no compromise, the change of sovereigns will tell in favor of the Liberals. If, however, there should be any statesmanship or patriotism left in England, the death of the King should lead to a truce or to an arrangement whereby the Liberals should have the assurance that they should have a majority in the House of Lords whenever a general election proves they have a majority in the nation.

All the papers in all the world are discussing King Edward's ten years' reign. In this article it isn't my desire to write the history of his reign or to do anything beyond stringing together before the readers of the American my personal impressions concerning the King as a man and as a ruler.

Let us first see what the King is supposed to be, first in sight of God; secondly in sight of his subjects. The curious computation was made in 1891 that the prayer prescribed to be said for the royal family must have been said in the hearing of congregations at home and abroad at least 100 million times between the birth of the Prince of Wales and his fiftieth birthday. In 1891 the nation ceased to pray for Edward as the Prince of Wales. The moment the Queen died he was prayed for in the terms of the "prayer" duly set forth and prescribed in the "prayer book for the kings and majesties." The directions to the King of Kings and the Lord of Lords are more explicit, as is fitting considering that the personage to be prayed for had ascended to the throne.

"The King Can Do No Wrong"

The sovereign is so surcharged with the grace of God that he always does God's will and walks in his way weighted down with the heavenly gifts of health and wealth, and so strong that he can vanquish every foe—that is, the King for whom the pious folk of the national church pray twice a day—that is the ideal King of the prayers of the church. The ideal or theoretical king of the constitution is almost as far removed from the real.

The king is never an infant in laws. Neither can he ever die. The King can do no wrong. Blackstone in his famous commentaries lays it down as the law of England that "the King is not only incapable of doing wrong, but even of thinking wrong; he can never mean to do an improper thing and in him is no folly or weakness."

According to Sir Erskine May, "His Majesty cannot be sup-

World's Greatest Gathering of Crowned Heads to Attend Funeral

King George of Greece

King Gustav of Sweden

Rulers of World's Great Nations Plan to Join With England In Its Mourning.

LONDON, May 8.—The funeral of King Edward, as the plans are outlined to-day, will probably be the most imposing in the history of modern times. The array of Kings and other crowned heads will surpass anything of the kind seen in the last century, not even excepting the jubilee of the beloved Queen Victoria. For the King was related by blood to practically all the royal houses of Europe and by friendship or treaty with practically all the other great nations of the earth.

The date has been temporarily set for May 17. It may be postponed for a short time to allow the crowned heads to congregate.

Want Roosevelt as Envoy.

The report cabled here that President Taft is considering the appointment of Former President Theodore Roosevelt as special ambassador to the funeral is received in official circles with delight. No American has ever been more popular with the English people. His coming would be considered a fitting tribute for the American people to the great English King. It would also give the American representative rank with the most powerful of the crowned heads present.

Emperor William of Germany, nephew of King Edward, has promised to attend the funeral. The Czar of Russia, who often turned to his friend King Edward for advice, is expected. The Queen of Holland is related to the British royal family, the King of Denmark is a brother of the Dowager Queen Alexandra; the Queen of Norway is daughter of the late King, the Queen of Spain a niece, the Queen of Sweden is related by blood, and so on through the entire list of European royalty.

And even far Japan, the latest ally of the British King, through whom he sought to maintain the peace of the Far East, will be represented. Two Japanese Princes are already in England and will stay over for the funeral.

The President of France, the traditional enemy of whom King Edward made an ally and a friend, is expected.

Pray for Edward.

Prayers are being said to-day throughout the English speaking world, first for the repose of the soul of the great King whom all loved because he loved them; then for the Dowager Queen, the kindly wife who worked throughout her reign for the happiness of the poor and suffering; and lastly for the new King and Queen, little known and little loved by those who know them.

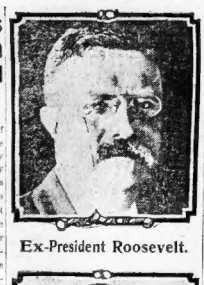
In all the cathedrals and churches of England—in the Roman Catholic as well as in the conformist churches—in the churches of South Africa, where the Boers learned to love their conqueror, in Australia, in India, and in Canada, and in the United States, wherever the Church of England prayer is used the late King and his successor are being prayed for.

KING OF SPORTSMEN, SAYS RICHARD CROKER OF LATE MONARCH

DUBLIN, May 7.—Richard Croker paid the following tribute to King Edward "In the death of the King, the world of sport loses not only a royal patron, but a noble friend. In truth he was the king of sportsmen whom all England will mourn. Civilization will mourn him as a patron to all sportsmen."

JAPANESE PRINCE IN ENGLAND, MAY ATTEND FUNERAL

DOVER, Eng., May 7.—Prince Fushimi and his suite arrived this evening and hastened to London. It is reported that the Prince, will be Japan's special envoy at the funeral of King Edward.



Ex-President Roosevelt.

King Frederick of Denmark

King Alfonso of Spain

QUEEN'S GRIEF OVER LOSS IS PATHETIC

LONDON, May 7.—The grief of the Dowager Queen at the death of her royal husband is pathetic. Since early morning she has been in and out of the death chamber, directing everything, personally placing the wealth of flowers that have been received, and giving her directions with stately dignity, but at the same time inconsolable. She cannot be persuaded to remain in her own room to take the rest of which she is so much in need.

King George, Queen Mary and two of their sons, Prince Edward and Prince Albert, the former of whom is soon to become the Prince of Wales, spent an hour at Buckingham palace. They are the only members of the family who have yet seen Alexandra. All other callers of the royal family had been received by Princess Victoria.

ROOSEVELT SAYS PLANS ARE ALTERED

STOCKHOLM, May 7.—Col. Roosevelt said this afternoon:

"The death of King Edward will alter the plans for my visit to both Berlin and London. I cannot yet say in what manner these plans will be altered, but at all events I intend to visit London."

Colonel Roosevelt and his party arrived here at 8:30 o'clock from Christiana. The ex-President was received at the station by Prince William and official dignitaries. Then he was taken in the royal carriage to the palace, where he was presented to King Gustave.

It is officially announced that Theodore Roosevelt's visit to Berlin will be postponed on account of the Kaiser's absence in England, where he will attend the funeral of King Edward.

NEW MONARCH TAKES OATH WHILE NATION MOURNS LOVED RULER

KING GEORGE'S FIRST MESSAGE TO AMERICA

King George's first message to America was to William H. Taft, President, White House, Washington, D. C., as follows:

I am deeply grateful to you, your government and your people for your condolences on the death of my beloved father and for your good wishes for my future prosperity. GEORGE, Rex et Imperator.
Marlborough House, London, May 7, 1910.

LONDON, May 7.—King George V. is on the throne of England. The new monarch, the second and least popular of the sons of Edward VII. was sworn in to-day and assumed his new office in the shadow of death.

The last guns have been fired for the dead King. It was a farewell salute for the beloved ruler, who in his nine years of rule had won the affection of the whole world. Five minutes later the new King met the Privy Council and took the oath of office.

It was not a happy scene. The gathering was brilliant in spite of the mourning in the empire. The Privy Councillors wore the insignia of their office, and all the dignitaries of the land were in attendance. But the new King could scarcely speak above a whisper. His voice was choked with emotion as he uttered the first few words of his reign.

"I shall endeavor," he said, "under the guidance of God to maintain the high traditions of the British Court and to fulfill to the best of my abilities the great trust reposed in me."

New Ruler Has Retained Father's Advisers

The distinguished audience broke up in silence as the King handed back the seals of office to the Asquith ministry and issued his first proclamation retaining in office those appointed by his father.

London is hushed. All places of business have been closed since the sad news was made public. Vast throngs crowd the streets and loiter around the palace. But all are orderly and well behaved. The theatres are closed. All private entertainments have been abandoned.

Parliament met to-day in accordance with the Constitution. The Lords took the oath of allegiance. The Commons had a formal meeting and adjourned.

Mourning of the King is world-wide. Messages of condolence have come from every nation on earth. President Taft has sent his message of sorrow. Former President Roosevelt sent a telegram to the widowed Queen.

The grief over the death of King Edward is genuine. No more sincere mourning has been seen in this country. Even the love for Queen Victoria was no greater. Every place of business was closed to-day. The theatres were dark, the Stock Exchanges ceased business, all social events were abandoned.

Heralds In Quaint Garb Proclaim King George

The people had hardly learned the news of their King's death when the heralds appeared, in their picturesque, quaint garbs and proclaimed the new King-George V., "by the Grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British dominions beyond the seas, King, Defender of the Faith and Emperor of India."

Shortly after that the Privy Council was assembled and George V. took the oath. It was here that the new King delivered his first utterance, a simple promise to follow in the footsteps of his father.

Then the King signed the proclamation confirming the appointment of all those who held office under his father.

The Liberal Cabinet, with Prime Minister Asquith, holds over. The King went through the formal routine of handing back to the ministers the seals of their offices. How long the ministry will last, however, none will guess.

To-morrow the people will get a little light on their new sovereign, for then his address to the people will be read. Little interest is attached to this, however, because of the usual routine followed in those addresses. As long as the Asquith ministry holds over it

MAN WITH BROKEN NECK GETTING WELL

Clayton Seaboyer, teamster, thirty-seven, whose home is at No. 124 Boston street, Dorchester, is living with a broken neck at Boston City hospital. The vertebra was fractured April 6, and since that time Seaboyer has steadily improved, and now the doctors say he will probably recover.

The case is one of the strangest ever to come under the eye of Boston surgeons, they say, and has attracted no end of attention from medical and surgical experts. Most people who manage to bear up under a broken neck have to wear steel cages in after years, but not so with Seaboyer. His fracture is knitting slowly, and when he departs from the hospital, he will be able to hold his head as high as the next one.

Seaboyer was driving his team April 4, when a friend sitting by him on the seat gave him a tilt which sent him to the ground. Landing on his neck, he was unable to move, and at City hospital, a fracture was found of the neck. Since that time, Seaboyer has lain on a plaster cast with bags of sand carefully placed about his body. He will be able to sit up in a week. He is under the care of Dr. Hassett of the hospital staff.

FUR WILL FLY IN STATE COMMITTEE

The forty members of the Republican State Committee will meet on Wednesday in the Kimball Building. William B. Wilcox of Dorchester is expected to say a few words in favor of his contention that the committee should go on record against the legislation that the New Haven Railroad is seeking at the State House.

The stand pattern will not discuss Willcutt and his anti-New Haven movement. Willcutt wrote a letter on the subject a few days ago to Chairman Hatfield, the Mayor of Newton. Chairman Hatfield has told his friends that the letter was printed in one of the newspapers before he read the original.

MATTHEWS PICKED FOR AN ASSESSOR!

IT WILL be considerable of a shock to the politicians, but it was stated on excellent authority yesterday that Mayor Fitzgerald was considering the appointment of Ex-Mayor Nathan Matthews as a principal assessor.

Matthews was chairman of the original Committee of Nine, whose primary purpose was to find a man who could lick Mayor Fitzgerald for Mayor, a campaign which not succeed, but its efforts were none the less sincere.

The ex-Mayor was also the chairman of the original Finance Commission, which did its best to prove that Mayor Fitzgerald was not a fit person to serve as chief executive of the city. He has also expressed his personal opinion of the first Fitzgerald administration many times and in highly uncomplimentary terms.

Mr. Matthews has had intimate relations with the assessing department, chiefly through his Back Bay properties, and may be said to be thoroughly familiar with the details of its management.

Last year Councilman Goodwin claimed that Matthews had been evading taxes for over twenty years on a parcel of property in the rear of the Hotel Oxford, which was known as Matthews' folly. The ex-Mayor disputed him and the Board of Principal Assessors sustained his contention, but it is a fact that taxes are now paid on the property. Abatements that he had secured on other Back Bay properties were also the subject of much discussion.

This year, when the ex-Mayor applied for a number of abatements upon certain of his properties the assessors gave him a chilly reception. He has appealed from their decision in an action brought in the Supreme court.

Ex-Mayor Matthews was quite a factor in the nomination of James J. Storrow by the Citizens' Municipal League, and he was also credited with being responsible for the failure of Councilman Goodwin to receive the league's endorsement for the City Council.

Just at present the Board of Assessors lacks a lawyer, and further, the Mayor is said to be delighted if put disgraced, as the way the Civil Service Commission has treated his appointees, and believe that the purpose is to give them a genuine reformer, whom they must deem suitable.

USES HORSE'S REINS AS A DEATH NOOSE

Martin S. Troy, twenty-five years of age, son of Michael J. Troy of No. 21 High street, Milton, last night hanged himself to a tree with the reins of a horse he was driving. He was dead when he was found for he chose a lonely spot in Brook road extension, near Centre street, Milton. Why Troy took his life is a mystery which none of his relatives nor friends can explain.

The young man was a driver for L. Crossman & Sons, liverymen at Milton Hill. Troy was sent with a consignment of hay and cream for the Crossman farm, taking a one-horse express wagon. He delivered the cream and started back to the stable.

He put the reins across a limb of a tree which overhung an embankment and around his neck, and leaped from the embankment.

Three Mr. Brook's coachman, Martin by name, found him dangling some time later. The police cut down the body.

A man by the name of Kelly, an employe of the Crossman concern, said: "None of us can account for Troy's suicide. When he left here he was in the best of spirits, and chatted with the men. He was for two years employed by the Crossmans and was never seemingly the least cast down nor despondent."

Boy Hurt in Fall From Car.

BROCKTON, May 7.—Harold Healy, six year old son of John Healy, of No. 18 Grove street, this city, while stealing a ride on the rear of an electric car to-day fell or jumped off and was seriously injured. He was taken to the Brockton hospital.

GOULD 'ENGAGEMENT' PRESS AGENT STORY

Beatrice Godfrey on Stage in London and Young Gould Ridicules Report.

The reported engagement of Beatrice Van Brunner Godfrey, formerly of this city, to Jay Gould, the young millionaire and athlete, is a clever press agent story, it is declared. This seems borne out now, both by the vehement denial by Mr. Gould and by the fact that Mrs. Godfrey is at present on the stage in London.

There has been considerable speculation as to the Mrs. Godfrey's movements since she left this city about a year ago, following her successful divorce suit against a young Boston athlete, Harvard graduate and member of Mrs. Godfrey, a millionaire lumberman.

Being a dancer of considerable ability, Mrs. Godfrey, following the granting of her divorce, secured an engagement to appear in Lulu Fallet's company as one of the Muses when La Lolo's girls were to appear in Boston last Fall. When the time came, however, Mrs. Godfrey was ill and the engagement fell through.

Secured Theatrical Engagement.

She went to New York, where her mother has been living with another daughter in the Ansonia. The mother is not living with Mrs. Van Brunner, but enjoys an allowance from him. There is an allowance, it is understood, for Mrs. Godfrey's two other sisters, who are now studying in Paris.

In New York the past season Mrs. Godfrey attracted the attention of Charles H. Shilligan, the theatrical producing and manager of Richard Carle and other stars. Mr. Shilligan discovered that the girl had dramatic ability, as well as being a clever dancer and of most attractive appearance. Mrs. Godfrey also became a close friend of Mrs. Carle's sister, Miss Held, through her husband, Florence Ziegfeld, offered the girl a position with the "Miss Innocence" company, which is now touring the country with the Ziegfelds for three weeks and appeared on the stage at times, taking small parts.

Late this Winter Mr. Shilligan engaged her for a small part in his forthcoming production of "The Echo," in which Richard Carle was to star. The play was produced last week in Chicago. But about a month ago Mrs. Godfrey decided she would like to go abroad. She sailed three weeks ago on the Adriatic for London with an engagement practically assuring her in one of George Edwards's musical shows.

Will Return in Fall.

At the end of the Summer season she will return to this country, for she has a contract with Mr. Shilligan for a part in the production next Fall.

Beatrice van Brunner Godfrey, whose declining beauty has been admired by all who saw her, was born in Atlanta, Ga., about twenty years ago. She was living in newport, Iowa, when she was sent to Boston to complete her musical education. She was married, after a rapid-fire court trip, to young Godfrey in October, 1907.

In the fall of 1908 the young couple separated. Godfrey filed a divorce libel against the bride. His bill of complaint he named Richard Carle and John H. McCarthy, the latter a wealthy Boston hotel man.

Mrs. Godfrey filed a cross-libel, alleging cruel and abusive treatment. The court came to trial last Spring. Mrs. Godfrey was granted a divorce. Prior to this Godfrey withdrew his libel, so that the wife's case was uncontested. The amount of alimony granted was not mentioned. Mrs. Godfrey also filed suit against her father-in-law, Lester Godfrey, for $50,000 for alleged alienation of her husband's affections. This was settled out of court.

EARTHQUAKE DEATH LIST GROWING DAILY

PORT LIMON, Costa Rica, May 7.—Advices reports from the interior come in slowly each hour and the total loss of life and property caused by the earthquake on Wednesday morning. The few telegraph wires still in operation are working badly and details of the disaster are meagre. So far only a few known as Americans were killed or injured.

The magnitude of the calamity that has befallen Costa Rica is only imperfectly conveyed by the first despatches. From the interior come accounts which describe a condition of devastation. The number of deaths is likely to exceed 1,000, may before times that number.

While the heaviest losses seem to have fallen on the ranges, it is said that along the great clefts in the earth to the north and south of the main line railroad villages have been engulfed. It will be two weeks or more before extensive communication is established.

Relative to population, the cost of lives has been heaviest in the mountain region. Shorter journeys have already been made throughout the volcanic areas. Into these a number of mountain villages have ceased to exist. Heavy losses will be incurred by the owners of banana and coffee plantations in these regions, many of which have been devastated.

'KEY UNDER MAT'; THIEF READS NOTE

Information Pinned on Door for "Mother" Results in Looting of Brighton Home.

Mrs. Otis H. Luscomb of No. 72 Ashford street, Brighton, will leave no more notes to "Mother" tacked on the front door. A burglar beat "Mother" to the note.

Desiring to go out for a half hour, Mrs. Luscomb thoughtfully pinned the following on the door for "Mother's" information: "The key to the hall is under the mat in front of the house. Will be back in a half-hour."

How the burglar, who happened along a moment later, must have chuckled. In a trice the thief had the key. The door was unlocked and the burglar had a half-hour's opportunity.

Not to be outdone in thoughtfulness, the burglar set the Luscombs' family alarm clock to go off about twenty-five minutes thence. The interim was utilized to collect a revolver, a watch, an opera cape, a $10 comb, several pearls and some rare old coins, about $300 worth of easy booty in all.

Then the burglar vanished, taking nice to restore the key under the mat. Mrs. Luscomb returned before "mother" did. She found the key, entered and was carefully putting away hat, coat and gloves when the alarm clock startled indistinctly.

"That's funny," said Mrs. Luscomb, and investigated. It was not so funny at that. Rifled drawers and disturbed clothing told the story.

The police declare Mrs. Luscombe should not have left the note to "Mother" on a burglar's afternoon call.

HURLED INTO TREES IN AUTO COLLISION

F. J. Wilson of Allston Escapes Injury, but Occupants of Other Car Shaken Up.

Frederick J. Wilson of No. 161 Massachusetts avenue, Allston, was shot twenty-five feet into the air amid some pine trees near the Chestnut Hill reservoir yesterday afternoon, when his big touring car, which he was driving, collided with an automobile containing Mr. and Mrs. William H. Brown and son Ralph of No. 249 Homer street, Newton Centre. The accident occurred on Commonwealth avenue, Brighton.

The impact sent Wilson's six-cylinder machine skidding toward the high embankment next to the reservoir. He escaped without serious injury.

The occupants of the other car were spilled on the ground, Mrs. Brown being severely hurt, while her husband and twenty-two-year-old son were badly shaken up.

A. L. Hopkins of No. 46 Commonwealth avenue carried Mrs. Brown in his auto to the Carey Hill Hospital, where she remained several hours, later being removed to her home.

WELCOME TO FR. SUPPLE.

Members of Two Churches Are to Unite in Reception Thursday.

Parishioners of St. John's and St. Hugh's Roman Catholic Churches of Roxbury will unite Thursday evening in tendering a reception to their pastor, the Rev. Patrick J. Supple, at Intercolonial Hall. Prelates of the archdiocese will be in the greeting to the venerable priest, who has returned, with restored health, from a three months' visit to Rome.

Bishop Anderson, representing Archbishop O'Connell, and Mayor Fitzgerald, acting for the city, will welcome Father Supple home. Men and women prominent in all walks of life are on the committee.

Joseph H. O'Neil is chairman of the committee.

Following the reception there will be dancing.

Thomas J. Clarke will be floor marshal, Tom F. Cuffe, assistant floor marshal, Thomas F. Coyne, floor director, and Daniel Clifford and Thomas Ducey assistant floor directors.

A whist tournament will be held for those who do not care for dancing.

The chairmen are: Joseph H. O'Neil, general committee; Julia T. Merrifield, whist; William J. Tracey, refreshment, and J. L. Gilman, publicity.

STEALING AS FINE ART IN HIGH LIFE

Rev. H. S. Bigelow of Cincinnati Tells Clubmen About Successful Thieves.

Rev. Herbert S. Bigelow of Cincinnati told the members of the Twentieth Century Club yesterday afternoon a few things about men in high life who have been successful thieves. He was speaking on the subject "Stealing as a Fine Art." Here are a few of his aphorisms:

"Don't steal in violation of any law of the State. Steal the Legislature and pass a law which will make it legal to steal. That's stealing as a fine art."

"The Bible reads: 'Thou shall not steal.' Nowadays some men who are prominent in civic virtue interpret that commandment so that it reads: 'Thou shall steal, but shall not get caught.'

"I believe we need two things, to correct high class stealing. First, educate the people as to the nature of public property and its value. Second, secure a more responsible form of government by which you may protect yourselves.

"Some change should be made to stop beggars in silk hats and fine clothing from calling for laws to permit them to steal. As long as that kind of business is carried on such beggars will forget the commandment, 'Thou shall not steal.'"

TWO CHILDREN HURT IN QUINCY RUNAWAY

Quincy, May 7.—Five-year-old Johnny Donovan and four-year-old Mildred Hellickson were thrown out from a runaway tonight. The boy's left arm was broken. The girl received a deep cut on the head.

Johnny asked his father's light rig in front of the house. "Come, Millie, let's go riding," he said. The children climbed in and neared the horse as the animal bucked. Then they screamed and the horse bolted, turning from Chubbuck street into South street, which is being repaired. The broken stone made the carriage bump so that the children were thrown out onto the jagged points of the rocks.

ENORMOUS STATE TAX SADDLED ON CITY BY LOBBYISTS

Total for '10 Will Be $6,000,000, of Which Boston Must Pay Over a Third.

State tax for 1909....	$4,500,000.00
Boston's burden	1,675,000.00
Boston's burden, per $1,000.....	3.40
State tax for 1910....	6,000,000.00
Boston's burden	2,100,000.00
Boston's burden per $1,000 on same total valuation as last year	3.20
Increase for State....	1,500,000.00
Increase for Boston..	525,000.00
Increase for Boston per $1,000 on same valuation as last year	.80

THE State tax for 1910 will be $6,000,000, an increase of $1,500,000 over last year's tax, and Boston's burden will be $2,100,000, an increase of $525,000 over last year, according to Representative Norman H. White of Brookline, House chairman of the Legislative Committee on Ways and Means, which passes upon the State's appropriation bills.

Representative White says that the Ways and Means Committee, as a body, cannot be blamed for the increase in expenses. He says that the members of his committee have done their best to kill needless appropriation measures and cut down extravagant ones.

The only explanation left is that lobbying and log-rolling in the Massachusetts Legislature have defeated the economic efforst of the Ways and Means Committee, and succeeded in saddling an enormous tax on the State, and on Boston in particular. State Commissions and departments have not been innocent of blame for the increase. They, too, have lobbied for the passage of their pet appropriation bills.

Not a Highway for Suffolk.

The Highway Commission yesterday announced that its expenses for building new highways which it has planned this year will be $358,216.03. Boston will not get one of these proposed highways and yet Boston will pay $133,420.83—35 per cent, on the total—for the work of construction.

This money is to be spent to build highways in every county of the State except Suffolk. The allotments range from $200 for the towns of Leverett and Boston to $21,000 for the city of Holyoke. Middlesex county will get $35,400 worth of new highways, the largest slice handed to any county in the Commonwealth.

Last year's State tax was $4,500,000. In 1908 it was $3,500,000. In 1907 it was $4,500,000. The figures for 1908 established the present high-water mark.

Tax Will Reach $6,000,000.

Just how high the State tax for this year promises to be was not known until Representative White last Friday opposed an increase from $40,000 to $65,000 in an appropriation resolve for the New Bedford Textile School. He argued that so much of the State's money should not be spent unless it was shown to be needed. He added that the need hadn't been shown in this case.

Representative John J. Conway of West Roxbury objected to the State's spending more money than the $40,000 provided by Ways and Means, "while the New Bedford manufacturers, who profit by the school are enabled to say 30 per cent, dividends, refuse to contribute a nickel towards its support."

The ensuing debate showed that many of the influential members of the House were in favor of allowing the increase. White then announced the enormous increase that is expected in the State's tax for this year. "Last year," he said, "it was $4,500,000. This year it will not be less than $5,500,000, and promises to reach $6,000,000."

STABBING IN CAMBRIDGE.

Brother Accused of Assaulting Brother With Knife.

Adam Jacicwicz, forty-two years of age of No. 313 Portland street, East Cambridge, is charged by the Cambridge police with dangerously stabbing his brother, Gus, thirty-five years of age. Gus is in the Cambridge Relief Hospital in a critical condition while Adam is in the police station charged with assault with a dangerous weapon.

The brothers were in Boston until a late hour last night. They had been drinking. On their way home in an electric car they quarreled as to who should pay the fares. They continued the dispute when they got off at Portland and Cambridge streets and all the way to their home. Once at the police say, rushed upstairs, grabbed a knife and ran back to the street, where he stabbed his brother in the neck, back, sides and abdomen.

RAIN TODAY AND TOMORROW

Prediction That Indicates Danger to Spring Millinery.

Be careful of your new Spring hats today, girls. Rain threatens this afternoon or this evening. The weather bureau says showers are probable.

And to-morrow's forecast:

Fair followed by showers during the afternoon or night. Monday unsettled, with occasional showers, moderate variable winds.

But the threat of showers for to-day isn't the worst the weather bureau had to hand out. The weather sharps have would not be surprised if many of next week's days were showery and threatening. The temperature is expected to range between 60 and 75 degrees.

The maximum temperature yesterday was 70 degrees, a fair average temperature for the May 7ths for forty years.

Yesterday the weather in the Mississippi Valley and Lake regions was cloudy with occasionable showers. Rains were also reported from many southeastern cities and towns.

CAR BLOCKS LOOP TRACK.

Derailment Holds Up South-bound Subway Traffic.

By the derailment of an empty eight-wheel westbhus car on the loop track at the Tremont street subway station at 9 o'clock last night there was a blockade of all south bound cars which terminates at that point. Passengers were compelled on the south bound track, used by cars going from the North to the Park street emergency crew of the Elevated succeeded after much difficulty in placing the wheels of the car on the tracks and traffic was resumed.

$700 Fire in Liverpool Street.

Fire which started on the first floor of the three-story wooden dwelling house, at No. 91 Liverpool street, occupied by Lombardi Agrilli and family, shortly after 9 o'clock last night caused excitement in that section. The flames spread to the second floor and when the fire department responded to a summons from box 652, at Decatur and Liverpool streets, the building was enveloped in flames. After a half hour's work the firemen extinguished the blaze. The damage was $700.

STRACHAN WONDERS WHO IS NEMESIS PURSUING HIM

Some Mysterious Person Has Spent Big Sums to Expose Well Known Accountant.

WHO is the Nemesis who paid the bills for the exposure of George Duthie Strachan, public accountant?

How had Strachan offended this Nemesis, who sent detectives across the sea at great expense and investigated State and Federal records, in order that the exposure might be more complete?

Why did his Nemesis wait until Strachan had reached the very pinnacle of professional greatness, had been employed by a committee of the lawmakers of Massachusetts to reveal the tracks taken by a dishonest bank cashier?

Why did the blow fall just as the Southbridge Investigating Committee was about to fix its report in the Legislature?

Strachan was arraigned in the Police Court at Brookline yesterday charged with a statutory offence. He was held in $2,000 for his re-appearance on Memorial Day.

Wife and Children Across Sea.

While Strachan was at the head of a force of public accountants in the savings bank at Southbridge, detectives of the Wood-Morgan Agency in Court street were digging up his past straight back to the cradle in Scotland. They found a wife and five children in Aberdeen. They found an alleged wife in Brookline. They found a child in Abington, boarded out by the State at $2 per month. They found naturalization papers in which Strachan appears to have declared that he was married but had "no family."

They brought the real Mrs. Strachan to Boston. The newspapers, reciting in one column the latest development in the Southbridge Bank matter, told in another of the sensational arrest of the public accountant who had explained how and when John A. Hall got away with it.

Who paid the bills?

"We were hired by a firm of attorneys," say the detectives.

"We have nothing to say to the newspapers," say the attorneys.

Detectives are Silent.

Strachan can only "guess." He has already, according to men who claim to have talked with him, ventured several "guesses." Nobody knows which, if any, was right.

"It is improper for us to discuss the case in any of its phases," Manager James R. Wood, Jr., of the Wood-Morgan Detective Agency, said last night to the American, "and if I were not that the details of the investigation have been printed, I could not even listen to the question. The identity of the person behind the investigation is unknown to us. All we know here is that a firm of reputable attorneys employed us for a legitimate inquiry, and delivered the goods, and are now busy about something else."

"If you care, you might see the attorneys in the case, Drew & Kennard of the Kimball Building."

Attorney Drew was "too busy to see anybody." Another young man, apparently connected with the office, came out to say so.

"Not a word," the young attorney said, "not a single word about the Strachan case. It has already been argued between the office and counsel for Strachan that the newspapers have had enough."

"Not a Word," Say Lawyers.

"But who is your client in the case?" the young man was asked, "who cared for him during about G. Duthie Strachan, or hadn't he enough, to——"

"Not a word," said the representative of Drew & Kennard.

There were some, yesterday, who thought that perhaps Strachan had been too active and too indiscreet in the affair of the $500,000 theft at Southbridge.

This theory was ridiculed by a member of the legislative investigating committee. "It wasn't Strachan we hired," said the lawmaker, "but the firm."

Helen Jane Ducane Giles claims to be the wife of Strachan. They were married, she says, in 1892, at Aberdeen, when she was 20 and Strachan was 27. There are five children, Mrs. Strachan says. The eldest, Methuen T., came over with her.

The Brookline Mrs. Strachan was Edith Withers of Birmingham, Eng., now about as old as Helen Giles was in 1892. The detectives say that Strachan has one son by the younger woman, that this boy was born at Birmingham, Eng., in 1906, brought to this country and deserted and for several years has been a ward of the Commonwealth.

COLLEGE GIRLS IN COMEDY

"Fandango Land" Successfully Given in Wellesley Barn.

"Fandango Land," a musical comedy written and staged by members of the Wellesley College graduating class, was given in the College Barn last evening. The book was written by Miss Elizabeth Boyd, author of this year's freshman play, Miss Emma Hawkridge, editor of the Wellesley Magazine, and Miss Isadore Douglas. The thirteen songs introduced were composed by Miss Edith Sweetser, Miss Sara Marshall and Miss Margaret Wilbur. The catchiest, "A Suffragette Is Not My Idea of a Perfect Lady," made a hit. There were forty girls in the chorus.

A CHEMIST'S DISCOVERY

New Remedy for Eczema and Other Skin Troubles

The most remarkable feature about Cadum, the new remedy for skin diseases, is that its beneficial action is seen in every case where it is applied. Not a single instance has been found where it failed to allay the terrible itching of eczema at once. People who have been afflicted with eczema for years and have tried everything without being relieved should take fresh courage, for the new remedy Cadum is different from anything else. It is the discovery of a chemist, who felt for years that the world needed a cure for eczema and other skin troubles, and as a result of his studies and experiments Cadum was the outcome. While possessing such remarkable powers in overcoming different forms of skin troubles, Cadum contains no dangerous ingredients. When applied over unsightly sores on the face and hands, it forms a thin, almost invisible coating, so that the disease is covered up while the healing process is going on. The 10c. size is intended for trial purposes by those who wish to test its wonderful virtues in skin troubles such as hives, pimples, blotches, tetter, itch, acne, herpes, scaly skin, rash, psoriasis, ringworm, chafings, eruptions, sores, scabs, itching piles, scurvy, etc. Large boxes 25c. at all druggists.

GIVE PLAY FOR CHARITY.

Alice in Wonderland Presented for Union Vacation House.

"Alice in Wonderland" was presented yesterday afternoon in Union Hall, Boston Young Men's Christian Union, No. 48 Boylston street, by the Employed Association of the Women's Educational and Industrial Union, for the benefit of the Union Vacation house.

Bertha E. Mahoney played Alice. The other principal characters are taken by the following young women: Edith Reeves of Medville, Helen Hill, Louis Garland, Gertrude Waters, Orlois Martin, Marion Frank, Alice Diaz, L. F. Moreland, Ruth McAllister, Beatrix Fuller, May Dooley and Anna Murphy.

MOTORMAN IS BLAMELESS.

Selectmen Protest Speed of "L" Cars.

John J. Walsh, Brookline, the motorman whose car struck and killed Mrs. Bridget Walsh on the night of April 15, at the corner of Boylston and Hammond streets, Brookline, was discharged when arraigned on a charge of manslaughter in the Brookline Municipal Court yesterday. Walsh was freed from all blame by the court.

As a result of the accident, the Selectmen of Brookline yesterday sent a letter to the Boston Elevated, asking that orders be issued to have cars run south on Beacon road and Hammond street, crossing, that motorman stand and signal before a release, and he was put to bed again.

INSPECTOR BYRNES DEAD.

Famous New York Detective Succumbs After Long Illness.

NEW YORK, May 7.—Thomas Byrnes, who as head of the New York detective department came to be known all over the civilized world as one of the greatest thief catchers the country ever produced, died to-day from chronic indigestion and gastritis.

Death came while Inspector Byrnes was he loved to be called, although he had been a superintendent of police) was surrounded by the members of his family. Two months ago he was reported as dying. He rallied, however, and was able to leave his sick bed. Two weeks ago, however, there came a relapse, and he was put to bed again.

COMPETE FOR $50 PRIZE.

Annual Oratorical Contest To-morrow at Boston College.

At 8 o'clock to-morrow night in Boston College Hall, the annual oratorical contest for the students will take place. The students chosen this year to compete for the $50 in gold are William E. Conroy, '10, of Weston; William G. McHale, '10, of Somerham; Leo P. Supple, '10, of Holliston; Louis A. White, '10, of Jamaica Plain; Michael A. Hanlgen, '11, of South Framingham; Leo F. Noonan, '11, of Quincy and David B. Waters, '11, of Newton.

The students of the French Academy of the High School department will give two French plays in the college hall on Wednesday evening, May 18, under the direction of the Rev. George D. Butler, professor of French.

SMALLPOX IN EAST BOSTON.

Five Cases Discovered. First Victims from Cape Brenton.

Five cases of smallpox were discovered yesterday on London street, East Boston, by the board of health. After the five victims had been transferred to Gallop's Island, the house was quarantined and about one hundred persons in the neighborhood were vaccinated. One of the victims was a young girl, who came from Cape Breton four weeks ago to visit her parents in the London street house. She was the first one taken ill, and four others in the house, three of whom had not been vaccinated, were infected.

Chief Examiner O'Shea of the board of health yesterday declared there was no cause to fear a spread of the disease.

DOUBLE LEGAL STAMPS MORNINGS

REPRESENTATIVE POPE BROKE PLEDGE ON INCOME TAX

Legislator, During Campaign, Made Written Promise Favoring Amendment.

REPRESENTATIVE FRANK H. POPE, Democratic legislator from the strongly Republican eleventh district, not only helped the Republican State machine and the vested interests to defeat the ratification of the income tax amendment by Massachusetts, but also commercialized and broke a written pledge to support the amendment. The written pledge has been unearthed by the Boston Sunday American.

Leominster, Mass., October 25, 1909.

If elected to the House I hereby pledge myself to vote for the ratification of the proposed income tax amendment to the national constitution.

Candidate for Representative Eleventh Worcester District.

The Pope pledge was sent last Fall to the Harvard committee, captained by Young Roger Sherman Hoar of Concord, after there had been mobilized in the Democrats of Leominster and was seeking election. The income tax was a leading issue in the election of Senators and Representatives last Fall. Candidates in communities of Leominster type were anxious at that time to have the voters believe they intended to support the measure.

The Harvard committee, for some reason or other, failed to record Representative Pope's name in the list of pledged supporters of the income tax amendment which they sent to the legislative reporters for the newspapers. Representative Benjamin Sharp of Nantucket was another pledged supporter whose name they failed to record. Both of these men's names were found signed to pledge cards unearthed by the newspapers.

Representative William F. Fletcher of Sandwich was selected by the Harvard committee as a pledged supporter of the income tax amendment. Mr. Fletcher had been rather hot under the collar over the printing of his name in the list of income tax somersaulters. Here is the pledge which he sent to the Harvard committee:

October 29, 1909.

If elected to the House, I shall probably vote for ratification of the proposed income tax amendment to the National constitution. I am favorable to it, but wish to study it more before deciding definitely.

(Signed) W. F. FLETCHER.

Candidate for Representative Second Barnstable District.

The income tax amendment is slated for the final kick by this year's Legislature next Thursday in the State Senate. Its most ardent advocates admit that it hasn't got one chance in a million with the Senate as constituted at present. Next year, however, they prophesy changes in the make-up of the Senate and House sufficient to insure the ratification of the amendment.

Pope Called a Leader.

Senator John F. Meaney of Blackstone, formerly chairman of the executive committee of the Democratic State Committee, will lead the fight for the income tax in the upper chamber. In this case in the House, the question will be on substituting favorable resolutions for the report of the Legislative Committee on Federal Relations—"no legislation necessary."

Knowledge of the fact that Representative Pope pledged himself to support "the proposed Income Tax Amendment" is certain to create a sensation in legislative and political circles. Pope is sometimes considered one of the Democratic leaders of the House. Other times he is looked upon as one of the Democratic whips for the Republican machine.

Until a few days ago he was considered to be a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congress from the Fourth Massachusetts district. Just now he is supposed to be candidate for re-election to his House seat. Just why he voted against the ratification of the Income Tax and more particularly why he consecrated that his pledge to support the measure will have to be answered when he goes before the voters next Fall.

LOVE OF BOSTON GIRL DRIVES BROKER TO SHOOT HIMSELF

Alice Mitchell Called on Phone to Hear Suicide Threat and Revolver Shot.

The deep blue eyes of Miss Alice M. W. Mitchell, one of Roxbury's most bewitching girls, played such havoc with the heart of Jarrett Jarrett, a young broker of New York, and the son of a chemist of national repute, that the boy made a rather clumsy attempt to fire a bullet into his brain when the girl told him that she could not marry him, according to a story told at the police station last night. No. 101 Brook avenue.

Jarrett was in New York last night said that Jarrett was in a precarious condition at his home, No. 1,776 Hundred and Eighty-first street, where he was being treated by the family physician and was in the care of a trained nurse and a valet from the Plaza hotel. He is merely a student at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in this city.

Suicide Threat Over Phone.

Holding a telephone to one hand and the telephone receiver in the other while talking to the girl in New York from his home in Brookline, Jarrett told Miss Mitchell in this city last Monday afternoon, "Jarrett threatened to shoot himself if I refused him," said Miss Mitchell to the police.

"I told him that I would not—listen," he called.

The girl dropped the receiver. Twenty minutes later a friend of Jarrett called the girl on the telephone and reported that the suicide threat had been carried out. But the bullet had hit a rather thick skull bone, glanced off, made a bad wound and continued on its somewhat harmless way.

Miss Mitchell is about twenty-two. She is slight, has blue eyes, golden hair, curled lips and teeth that sparkle when she speaks. She came down to the front door from the apartment of her parents on the upper floor of the house in which she lives and, in her usual cheerful manner, said nothing should not hear her story. She was very pale and her lips trembled as she talked. Once or twice she was on the verge of tears. She told the story:

"Harry is the only child of his family," began the girl. "His father is retired. The boy is an insurance broker. His mother and father are on their way to Europe. I have an aunt in New York and I was over there on a visit about nine weeks ago. I met Harry at the home of a friend.

"He is a dear boy, and he seemed to take a great liking to me from the start. I told him that I was engaged to some very good friend in Boston whom I was more determined to win my affections. He called me long distance from me out to dinner and to the theatre.

"He said that he loved me and that he would love me unless he could have me. I laughed at him at first and later I told him that I would not be true to him because he and told him to be nice and not think of such things.

Persistent in Love Making.

"But he told his parents that he was going to marry me and made the same statement to me. I told him that I did not succeed in getting me. His parents objected to me, and Harry's friends didn't like me. They called me a gold digger. I'm not successful in getting me. His parents objected to me, and Harry's friends didn't like me. They called me a gold digger.

"He said that he loved me and that he would love me unless he could have me. I laughed at him at first and later I told him that I would not be true to him because he and told him to be nice and not think of such things.

Persistent in Love Making.

"But he told his parents that he was going to marry me and made the same statement to me. I told him that I did not succeed

EX-MAYOR GREEN IS FORCED FROM HIS OLD-TIME HOME

Building Torn Down, He Moves for the First Time in Thirty Years.

AFTER thirty years as a lodger in the same house at No. 68 Harrison avenue, and fifty-three years in the same district, Dr. Samuel A. Green, bachelor, eighty years old, ex-Mayor of Boston and now librarian of the Massachusetts Historical Society, has been forced to move. The building in which he hoped to end his days is being torn down.

Dr. Green hunted for a month for a place in which to live. He might have gone to a boarding house, he might have secured some delightful place in Brookline or some other comfortable suburb; but he finally selected a little place at No. 60 Harvard street, South End, and is now getting there.

He has but little rooms, as yet sparsely furnished, but he is satisfied. He is still in the district in which he has spent the best part of his life, and from which he was elected Mayor in the eighties. He has watched the coming of the Americans, the Irish, the Germans, Jews, Chinese, Syrians and Negroes, and through it all he has enjoyed life and made friends with them all.

"The Syrians are now moving into this district," said the Mayor yesterday, "but I rather like their little children. There are so many of them, and they are really very pleasant. I talk to all of them, though I don't suppose they know me yet.

"I was born and my home is in this district. I have been here since 1837, with the exception of the years I spent in the West. I have lived in only two places.

"I first came to Loweland street. It was a native American residential community. It was on the outskirts then. The people used to come up and stick their noses over the sidewalk on Harrison avenue. There was all woodcutting. I was here how they came up the channel to the avenue. I can hardly believe that's the city now. The Back Bay deserved its name then. It was a real bay.

"For half a century I have watched the procession of nationalities in this district, and it has been interesting and instructive.

"Have I minded the changes? My shifting here through all that time is your best answer. I have enjoyed it, and I do not want to move now. I was here when I practiced medicine and made my friends. I have friends in other parts of the city, of course, but I have grown used to this, and I don't want to move.

"The Assyrians are all round me. The Jews are not so numerous as they used to be here. The Greeks are coming in rather quickly, and opening restaurants. That digs interest me.

"The first people in this district when I came here were the native Americans. The Irish followed them, and with them Dickens first found them. They were a fine lot. As they progressed they moved away and the Germans came next, and took their place. The lodging houses gave way to tenements.

"Then came the Jews. They were quiet neighbors, however, and most of them are moving away rapidly.

"Now the Greeks and the Syrians have been coming in great numbers.

"About twenty years ago the Irish of the Chinese came down Beach street any further I would move from here. The only place that I could take to would be my neighbors. But they came, attended their own business, and I stayed in the Harrison avenue house, which was conducted by Mrs. Fannie C. Miller. It was my home.

"So I hope I won't have to move again if I am getting old. I have just passed eighty, and do not see any reason why I should go borrowing trouble by changing the conditions under which I have lived most of my years. I am contented here, and contentment is the greater part of life at my age."

FAT FOLKS FAVOR

Home Mixture That Takes Off the Fat Rapidly—Causes No Wrinkles —No Stomach Ills and Requires Neither Exercise Nor Diet.

Too much fat is both uncomfortable and dangerous, but usually fleshy people prefer to put up with its inconvenience rather than punish themselves with the tiresome exercising usually prescribed, or endanger their health by taking the so-called "cures" and patent fat "reducers."

This self-sacrifice of comfort and health to overabundant fat is entirely unnecessary, however, as Mrs. Lucila Bigger tells us that a home mixture can be made far superior in every way to anything secret that will be for sale at any price. She said this simple mixture will take the fat off in two weeks without even causing wrinkles. Moreover it does not make one sick, but on the contrary a good thing for the whole system. Getting one ounce of Marmola and one ounce of Peronidin (Gerard's) from any druggist, and dissolving in a pint of wineless whisky. Take a tablespoonful after each meal and at bedtime. Gerard's Peronidin is a remarkable and 25% power in Peronidin. Gerard's Peronidin is a remarkable and 25% power in Peronidin. Gerard's Peronidin is a remarkable and 25% power in Peronidin

AUNT DELIA RAISING KILLARNEY ROSES FOR PRESIDENT

Favorite Bush Intended by Mrs. Torrey for Place in White House Grounds.

MILLBURY, May 7.—In her old-fashioned garden Aunt Delia Torrey is raising a bush of Killarney roses to send to her nephew, President Taft. It it fulfills its present promise it is destined for a place on the White House grounds.

In the same garden she is planting six other rose bushes, a gift to her from the President.

When the President was Willie Taft, the boy, he and his brothers loved to hear from Aunt Delia's lips the pretty fables from Greek mythology of the Hyacinth and of the Narcissus, stories portions of those old Greek tales as were suited to their childish understanding.

How Aunt Delia told stories to the President in his boyhood, how he loved her garden and how she keeps it now as it was in that bygone day, is told by Aunt Delia herself:

"I'm sure that the President is lonesome to see my rose garden in bloom. See, here are the six new rose bushes he sent me this week," said Aunt Delia, laughing with pleasure at the thought of her nephew Willie's thoughtfulness.

Just as Willie Knew It.

"For you see," she continued, "my rose garden is just as it was when the President spent his Summers here. He always loved my garden, I think. He wasn't like other boys about a garden. He never liked to run out and tell him to keep out and to be careful and not trample down any of my flowers. I suppose that's why I was here at the old home that he learned to love flowers. I know I was fond of them and I'm sure every child would if told stories about them. I told him just as well of sitting on the front porch in the warm days of spring, when perhaps the President and his brothers, looking me, I was remember just as well of telling them the fable of the Hyacinth and the boy Hyacinth. Or how Apollo had accidentally slain Hyacinthus and how this little red flower sprung from his blood. And then there was the fable of the beautiful boy Narcissus who fell in love with his own face in the spring and was changed into the pretty flower called by his name.

Taft Liked Greek Tales.

"The President liked the stories from Greek mythology. I think every child who saw the flowers he had a deep respect for them as if they were even yet a part of those great warlike gods and goddesses and rescued the unfortunate.

Miss Torrey pauses a moment happily as she stood by her little garden and laughed and talked of the days when, years late in the afternoon and the air was good for a bit chilly. Aunt Delia wore a light white shawl about her shoulders and while this is her eighty-fourth Summer, she would little have guessed it, so erect her stepping bright from brush to hoe; counting the number of buds on the rose bushes or tenderly lifting the face of a drooping lily to the sunlight.

And nearly on his hands and knees was her very cheerful assistant. Yes, Aunt Delia's gardener is watching the rose bushes "what all the way from Washington, son," just as eagerly as is Miss Torrey. His name? Well, I think every one in Millbury knows him, and it's easy to forget that he was ever a boy. His name is Russell Lowell. No, no, Lowell, but he does, and I'm sure he'd not be loves Nature with all that's pure as much as did James Russell Lowell.

Cider Than Miss Torrey.

James, the gardener, is older than Miss Torrey. He's eighty-five. But if you think Miss Torrey gets young, you just ought to see James frisk about tending to the lawn and the flowers. He's taken care of the Torrey lawns for a great many years. And he knows just what to do for all the flowers. Of course there are times when he's not just sure, and then he has to hunt up Aunt Delia. But she quickly prescribes what shall be done.

And so these two fussing and puttering about among the tulip beds and the rose gardens, each with the enthusiasm of a child, talked and joked with the visitor.

"People ask me why I have such fine flowers, and I tell them it's all because I have such a good gardener," said Aunt Delia. And James pulling away the leaves from a plant near at hand, flushed despite his deep, healthy complexion, gained by years in the open, and one could see that he blushed a bit at the praise of Miss Torrey.

Bushes Sent by President.

Turning, Aunt Delia showed the bushes sent by the President.

"They have only been in the ground a few days," she said. "But this one has three buds on it and the others will soon show some, I think."

Even as she spoke, however, her visitor saw a little white painted stick firmly planted near a very, very young rose bush. The little bush was only a few inches high, and the visitor wondered what could be its variety. On the stick, in Aunt Delia's handwriting, was written: "President Taft."

"Yes," said Aunt Delia with a smile, "that is a bush I am raising to send to the President. It is a Killarney rose. I do not know that he has any favorites, but I like the Killarney rose very, very much, and if this bush will only grow up as I hope, I am going to send it to him for the White House grounds."

"But how do you get such a variety of tulips? They doesn't seem to be two alike," the visitor said.

Delights in Her Tulips.

"Oh! I get those from my florist, Mr. Dallachie, said Miss Torrey. "He always gives me the very best he has and these which you see have been planted for six years. You see I have the double tulips, and then almost every year a variety. I love flowers very much, I think they are so diverting, that you can go out every day and watch them grow. First you see the leaves come and then the buds and they gradually they unfold. It is all very wonderful, and I'm sure it makes one better, too.

"But I love my roses, I think as much as any of the flowers. I have many varieties and I don't know which is the better. I plan my gardens so that I have flowers of some kind all the Summer."

And then with a pretty little smile Aunt Delia said, "Perhaps the President will come next year to see how his rose bushes are getting on. Still he is a very, very busy young man, you know."

To Remove Superfluous Hair

Dr. Ainsworth, the prominent physician, says: "I can truly say that I consider De Miracle the only reliable preparation on the market for the removal of superfluous hair. I have used many preparations for that purpose, but none gave me satisfaction until I tried De Miracle, but on it I find a preparation that will do all that is claimed for it by its manufacturers and which gives perfect satisfaction in all cases." Better take a doctor's advice, don't be deceived with fake fire treatments. Poisonous, worthless concoctions are dangerous, besides, after you have used them it will be harder to remove the hair.

De Miracle is sold by Houghton & Dutton, and all other good stores. Booklet free, in plain sealed envelope, by De Miracle Chem. Co., Dept. 33, 1005 Lexington Av., New York.

BATTLE OF POSTERS TO BE FOUGHT BY LODGE AND FOSS

Senator Has Borrowed the English Idea and Learned Lesson from Congressman.

HENRY CABOT LODGE and Eugene Noble Foss will enter into a battle of the billboards next Fall for the political control of Massachusetts. The stakes will be high. The Governorship hangs in the balance. Three new Legislators are to elect a United States Senator for a full term of six years.

That it will be a "campaign of posters" was admitted last night by strategists in both camps. Foss showed last Fall that he is a firm believer in printer's ink. He poured money into the counting rooms of the country newspapers and thought nothing of buying a page or a half-page once a week or every day.

It has remained for Senator Lodge to borrow the political poster for the British. A Massachusetts man who called upon the Senator in Washington the past week found him enthusiastic over some specimen posters sent to him recently by Conservative friends in England. The Senator admitted that the posters had been sent over by request.

Famous "Free Trade" Poster.

There were dozens of posters in the Lodge library, but the Senator admitted that he thought particularly well of the poster entitled "Free Trade." He thinks it might be effective in Massachusetts.

It is said to have been by far the most effective of all the posters used in the British campaign. It is the reproduction of a decidedly crude drawing and the reproduction was made in colors and by comparatively expensive process and is very interesting, so as to be such a piece of decoration as might be prized and appreciated by a lodger house.

The picture shows the interior of a Englishman's cottage, with the members of the family seated at one side of the room in the deepest despair. At the other side of the room sits the wife weeping bitterly, with her head leaned upon the table, while near her stands a poorly-clad child with a loaf in her arms. Beside the latter, on the floor, lies his kit of tools.

Picture Bought by Politicians.

This picture was bought by the Conservatives so that they might have the sole right of reproducing it, and when reproduced, with the words, "Free Trade," printed in big letters across the picture, it became one of the most effective documents, the effectiveness of which may perhaps be realized by those who have not seen the description. Under the title no further text is necessary to complete the story. As a result of free trade, and the depression of English industry, the family of workmen is supposed to be out of a job.

As a Republican and a Protectionist Senator Lodge is much interested in the posters put out in England to help the tariff reform propaganda, since these "tariff reform" stands for their imposition rather than for a reduction or removal as here. The same poster, therefore, may be borrowed for use in Massachusetts.

Foss Also Imports Posters.

Congressman Foss is also supplied with a lot of specimen British posters, and long has it been known that if he were to run for Governor he would probably campaign the cartoonists and lithographers and billposters would be called from Europe to North Adams, and from Fall River to Newburyport.

Foss's advertising last Fall caught the Lodge people entirely unprepared. The newspaper cuts about the cost of living and the grip of the political boss, published by Republican papers calling to admit that there was a fight on.

"That condition of lethargy," one of the Lodge-Crane captains in Boston said last night, "will never exist again."

And so, it was said, Massachusetts is to see the liveliest and most eventful campaign the Bay State has known. By the same mark it will also be the bitterest. The election of a Democratic Legislature would mean the retirement of Henry Cabot Lodge.

Address By Dr. Eliot.

President Emeritus Eliot of Harvard will give at the Art Museum this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock a talk on "The Training of the Senses and the Artistic Spirit." Professor Henry L. Seavey of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology will then lend a circuit in classical art this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

COMET GETS BUSY AS RIVAL TO --- GUESS? WHY, CUPID!

Dr. Halley's Heavenly Namesake Responsible for Unique Engagement Party.

EXIT the moon for romance; enter Halley's comet.

For Boston has the honor of announcing the first comet engagement. The parties are both prominent in society in Boston and Chicago. The witnesses at the announcement are leading business and literary men of this city.

The Pops, at Symphony Hall, started the party by rendering at 4 in the morning the Ferncroft Inn, with a supper-breakfast.

Frederick S. Osgood of Winchester, a prominent Boston business man was the host. The young woman upon whom he announced his engagement is Miss Amy Warder of Chicago.

Comet Expert was There.

And to make the party perfect Professor William H. Pickering of Harvard University, one of the best-known comet experts in the world, was present and entertained the other guests with reports of many of the greatest of all wanderers, who visits this earth once in seventy-six years.

There was just one comet spoil to the shindig party; the comet did not realize the honor being done him and did not appear.

The party began at 8 o'clock by visiting Symphony Hall. At the close of the thirty-five invited guests was present. The misses one and all were in evening dress. Harry J. Gilfeden, the aeronaut, and he was responsible for the whole affair, had himself engaged his balloon. The party forgave him.

Even the comet honored the comet. The first number on the program was a march by Strauss, called "The Comet." After the concert the party, in six automobiles, started for the Ferncroft Inn at Middleton, there to have their supper-breakfast and later to chew the comet. The dinner started at last midnight. There was two hours for eating, for at 2 the comet was due to make his appearance.

Comet Story on Menu.

The menu was especially prepared for the occasion, and in it was the most interesting part of the whole program—an article on Halley's comet, especially prepared by Professor Pickering.

At 1:30 the meal was over. The party had watched the sky with apprehension. At the check list Miss Warder, Miss Ward midnight. The clocks by Professor Pickering had started their appetites for celestial wanderers.

The thirty-four guests and the engaged couple started out for the veranda for the first of the evening. The sky was very cloudy and Professor Pickering shook his head dubiously. They waited and watched, however. Field glasses were brought into use, and a small telescope had been fitted up for the occasion. But there was no sign of the comet. They waited for two and twenty and thirty minutes. The first hour passed and still no comet.

Then Professor Pickering came to the rescue and substituted for the celestial visitor. He did it so well that the party was happier than if they had viewed the real thing.

Professor Pickering's Lecture.

For thirty minutes he talked to them of the wandering star which is soon to play its game pranks in the heavens, and many of the great distances it covers, and how it is kept from colliding with the earth.

Among the party were:

Charles F. Ames, Dr. D. A. Babcock of Fall River, Russell Boyden, Dr. Philip Boston, Willard A. Bradley, George E. Briggs J. Winn Brown, Frank L. Hertz, Harry C. Barrage, Albert E. Carr, Dr. Mott Cummings, Wyllys Cummings, Elwell W. Gilson, Arthur W. Hale, Francis Hight, Lee Hill, Edmund B. Kelly, Wilbur Sabin B. Keith, Wilbur Sabin B. Keith, Jr., Locke, Edmund B. Osborne, Professor W. Pickering, Ralph Pope, Preston, Arthur W. Reynolds, John E. Rousmaniere, Newton Stanley Franklin P. Shumway, Fred W. Tenney, William A. Thbodeau, Elmer E. Silver, Edwin J. Starr, Edward D. Walford, Allen H. Wood.

Done With Opera Now, Hammerstein Reveals Singers' Real Salaries

Tetrazzini Drew $1,500 a Night, $100 More Than Mary Garden Received.

What the public thinks an opera singer is paid and what he really gets are very often two different things. It is known that some opera artists are paid very high salaries and it is supposed that others receive proportionately. The real facts are revealed in a statement by Arthur Hammerstein, son of the Impresario, in which he tells exactly what his father paid the Manhattan artists.

The great stars did not receive huge salaries, but many well-established singers received comparatively low wages.

Tetrazzini was paid $1,500 a perform ance, a salary believed to be only surpassed by that of Mary Garden was paid $1,000 each time she sang. Renaud and Sammarco received $500 a night.

But Gerville-Reache received the comparatively small sum of $200 a performance, and Lina Cavalieri earned a little more than $300 a night, or a thousand per week. Trentini, the famous soubrette, got $150 per week. Dufranne received $200 a week, and Muratore only $250, because of the laborers leaving their work there. The company was so large that it has secured from forty to fifty men to take the places of strikers.

AIDS IRISH LANGUAGE.

Monaghan Association Also Plans Event for Women.

The County Monaghan Association has voted $25 in the Irish language fund of the Gaelic League. The association will hold a social tomorrow night in Wells Memorial building. A number of the women members being about to leave Boston for the summer months, it is intended that Monday night's affair shall be a "send-off" reception in their honor. The proceedings will be entirely social in nature. The members are using every effort to make a success of the May party in aid of Boston College, which is to be held on Thursday, May 26, in Faneuil Hall.

PARISHIONERS IN REUNION.

Irish Music Feature of St. Peter's And Paul Meeting.

The parishioners of St. Peter and St. Paul's Church, South Boston, will hold their annual reunion in Paul Revere and Talbot Halls, Mechanics Building, tomorrow evening. The church, the second oldest in the diocese, has the Right Rev. Monsignor Patterson for pastor.

A concert of Irish music will be a feature of the evening's entertainment. The programme will be rendered by a chorus of 100 voices, and by Mrs. Marie Houghton Spencer, Edward L. Sullivan and William J. Sullivan as soloists. The Bay State orchestra will also sing.

In its arrangements for the occasion the pastor has been assisted by his curates, the Rev. R. J. Whalen, the Rev. T. J. O'Connor and the Rev. William H. Grant. Daniel Maher will be floor marshal. The assistant floor marshal will be Dr. William J. Sheehan.

LABORERS AIDED IN PROVIDENCE STRIKE

PROVIDENCE, May 7.—The strike which the Building Trades Laborers' Union inaugurated a week ago to-day continues with the men, said to be 1,000 in number, and the building contractors still apparently as firm as ever.

The committee of six, which the Building Trades' Council appointed Thursday to visit the contractors and try to influence them to sign the scale demanded by the men, failed to report to Roderick McGeary, business agent of the council.

The three largest contracting firms in the city, J. W. Bishop & Company, Norcross Brothers and M. J. Houlihan, who employ ordinarily nearly 2,000 laborers, said that they had not met the Building Trades' committee. They said they would not recognize the union nor would they sign the scale demanded.

The laborers want an eight-hour day and 22½ cents an hour for excavators and 28½ cents an hour for bricklayers' tenders. Thursday night the Building Trades Council voted to aid the men on strike.

The partial tying up of the Bishop Company's work on the new factory at Greystone was the most serious blow the men struck. From 200 to 300 skilled tradesmen were compelled to quit work because of the laborers leaving their work there. The company says that it has secured from forty to fifty men to take the places of strikers.

WIND HALTS FLIGHTS.

Aviators Gather for Tests at Plum Island.

PLUM ISLAND, May 7.—A wind blowing thirty miles an hour prevented any flights by the little squadron of biplanes assembled here. William Hillard intended to make an ascent in the new Burgess biplane, but decided to postpone it. The action of the machine has thoroughly tried out. Mr. Hillard is famed as an auto racer. He is the brother of Robert Hillard, the actor.

A. J. Gutzmer of New York, a well-known aviator and inventor of the Pfitzner monoplane, has arrived and will have charge of the machine belonging to the Herring-Burgess Biplane Company. The French biplane designed by Farmer is being brought here from New York by Greeley-Curtis, but it has not yet arrived.

Conductor Is Acquitted.

QUINCY, May 7.—Conductor Robert J. Egan, accused of manslaughter in connection with the death of Roscoe Hunt of Braintree, April 9, was discharged when arraigned before Judge Avery in the District Court.

SNAG FOR MACHINE IN GRANITE STATE

EXETER, N. H., May 7.—Seventeen weeks before the first caucuses to be held in New Hampshire under the direct primaries act, the machinists of both the grand old parties are actually shaking with terror.

In a last grand effort to head off the nomination of young Robert Perkins Bass of Peterborough by the Republicans, the machinists have called upon the Old Guard, in Rockingham County, to draft Attorney-General Edwin G. Eastman of this town.

The Old Guard, the Rockingham County Republican Club, spent a whole afternoon here this week, baiting and cussin' direct nominations. Then they chose a committee to wait upon the Attorney-General.

Meanwhile the merry war of the machine boys is on. "Uncle Bill" Whittier, sitting impressively in the News office at Woodsville, pokes fun at the Bass boy; Colonel True Norris, presiding in the state house at Concord, is "agin" Bass; trying to see to it that, whatever happens in the Republican household, none of these insurgent sons o' guns will be nominated by the Democracy.

The gentlemen who got together to cry out against the Direct Primaries law included Colonel Rufus M. Elwell, Senator "Bill" Eastman of Portsmouth, John W. Kelley and Colonel John Pender, who "strongly denounced" the new law.

AIDS HOUSE FIRE.

Newspaper Thrown Through Window Starts Blaze.

Mrs. Mary Gallagher, who lives in the rear of 1 Bowdoin street, Dorchester, was arrested yesterday afternoon on a charge of setting fire to the house. Mrs. Gallagher is said to have thrown a newspaper through the window, which started a fire that did $100 damage.

FLOWERLESS FETES IF GARDENERS QUIT

NEWPORT, R. I., May 7.—If the Newport Four Hundred doesn't accede to the demands of the Newport Assistant Gardeners' Union the banquet tables and ballrooms of the millionaire set will be flowerless.

The Assistant Gardeners' Union, an independent body affiliated with no national organization, was formed a year ago for the uplift of the assistant gardeners of Newport. The union has 600 members, practically all the assistant gardeners on the big Newport estates.

The assistant gardeners say that they do the work while the head gardeners simply sit around and boss the job at $100 to $150 per month.

TIME TO TRY POSLAM

New Healing Agent Promptly Dispossess of Every Skin Affection.

The time to try poslam for eczema or any skin trouble is before experimenting with anything else. Then, too, it is the least expensive way, because poslam will do the work, making treatment by other means unnecessary. But no matter how many different things have failed, poslam should yet be used, for its healing properties are assured even in the most aggravated cases. All doubt as to its action is removed in the promptness with which it begins its work, stopping the itching with very first application. Eczema, acne, tetter, salt rheum, psoriasis, barber's and every form of itch yield to it readily and are permanently eradicated.

In less serious skin affections, such as pimples, rash, acne, blackheads, inflamed skin, etc., results follow over night, after a small quantity being applied. For white hands a special skin soap is necessary, and poslam soap fills the regular need. Both are obtained at all of Riker's stores, and Geo. F. Cox Drug Dept. Hospitals & Doctors, and other good drug stores.

Sample free trial treatment may be had free of charge by writing direct to the Emergency Laboratories, 32 West Twenty-fifth street, New York City.

LAWRENCE OFFICIALS FEAR INDICTMENTS

Rumored That Bills Will Be Reported Tomorrow Arousing at Least Dozen.

LAWRENCE, May 7.—This city is much wrought up over the report of the Grand Jury, which will be made Monday at Newburyport when, it is rumored, at least a dozen indictments may be returned against city officials and others for alleged corrupt acts while in office.

Those who have been trembling lest they be caught in the dragnet of the law received a shock yesterday when it was learned that the confession of one of last year's aldermen is to be supplemented and corroborated by the confession of another alderman, who will tell of the inside history of bribery and graft that has flourished in the city for a year.

When the whole story reaches the public, as it is now believed that it is bound to do, it is declared that Lawrence will throw Pittsburg in the shade as a city of graft.

It has come out that during the past administration graft of the most petty kind was also rampant. Liquor seized in raids, it is declared, was hauled away from the police stations to which it is taken.

Wagons would drive up to the stations and into them would be piled the liquor that was seized and ordered confiscated by the court. The law provides that which seized liquor shall be taken to the chief of the State Police in Boston. Not only was this not done but even empty beer cases and bottles were given away to friends of the men higher up.

The talk of what the grand jury has done during its investigation within the past five weeks is indulged in freely in the street. Nobody will be in the least surprised if there are as many as a dozen arrests when the report comes in.

The period of investigation covered especially by the grand jury begins with the first week of the administration of Mayor William P. White at the first of last year and reaches all through the regime of this Mayor.

Judge Sherman will preside in the Newburyport Court at which the grand jury reports.

DOCTOR, ILL, ENDS LIFE.

New York Physician Shoots Himself on Maine Visit.

NEW YORK, May 7.— Suffering from a slight mental ailment, Dr. F. Tilden Brown of No. 14 East Forty-eighth street, Manhattan, committed suicide to-day by shooting himself at Bethel, Me., where he had gone for his health. Dr. Brown, who was fifty-five years old, was under the care of a male nurse, who accompanied him to Bethel two weeks ago. A other watch had been kept on him, but early to-day he eluded his attendant. His body was found in a field near the Alden River.

QUINCY WILL SPEND $5,000 FOR 'FOURTH'

Parades, Athletics and Fireworks Being Planned for Celebration.

Fourth of July next will be a great day in Quincy if plans for celebrating the natal day of the nation are carried out. It is the birthplace of one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence and of two Presidents of the United States.

Citizens believe that there are few places in the country to which the Fourth means more and it is proposed to make the coming celebration a monster affair. Citizens recently voted at a city hall mass meeting to take steps to raise funds and a permanent organization was formed consisting of the following members of an executive committee: Eugene R. Stone, president of the Board of Trade, president; James F. Burke, member of the School Committee, vice-president; Arthur W. Stetson, secretary; Rupert Cladis, treasurer; T. L. Gammons, chairman of the finance committee; C. M. Gifford, chairman of the committee on sports; Mayor William T. Shea, chairman of the reception committee; Archie Briggs, chairman of the water sports; Charles W. Hanscom, chairman of the aerial committee; A. L. Whitman, chairman of the music committee; Colonel H. L. Rhoades, chairman of the parade committee; Alfred N. La Brecque, chairman of the publicity committee.

There will be a parade in the morning in which every organization in the city will be invited to take part, and after this main procession there will be a parade of "Horribles." There will be a yacht race in Quincy Bay, ball games, professional and amateur athletic events, daylight fireworks, a balloon ascension and band concert. There will be an extensive display of fireworks in the evening. The city will be asked to appropriate $1,000 and the rest of the $5,000 needed will be obtained through contributions.

TAO'S FAREWELL TO TAFT.

Chinese Prince Thanks Him for Magnificent Reception.

WASHINGTON, May 7.—President Taft has received a telegram of farewell from the Chinese Prince Tsai Tao, who sailed for Europe Thursday. The telegram is as follows:

Mr. President—As I am bidding farewell to the American shores, I desire to thank you with all my heart for the magnificent reception given me by the Government and people of the United States in every place that I have visited. I shall carry away with me to my own country all the pleasant memories of my stay in the United States. Long may Heaven bless you with health and happiness.

DINNER ROMANCE ENDS IN WEDDING

Hull Girl Will Be Bride of Englishman She Met at Banquet.

MR. AND MRS. CHARLES H. KNIGHT of Hull announce the engagement of their only daughter, Gertrude Elizabeth, to Frederic Crawley Neal of Boston, son of the late Albert E. Neal of Cloyne House, Loughton, England.

Mr. Neal is purchasing agent for the Nestor Gianacis Company of Roxbury. He has lived in this country about ten years. He was presented to Miss Knight at a dinner given by mutual friends six months ago.

On first acquaintance Mr. Neal discovered in Miss Knight a knowledge of business conditions, particularly in relations to the stock market and affairs of "the street," which surprised him until he learned that she was confidential clerk for Fields & Fay, brokers at No. 53 State street. Almost any man on State street could have informed him as to Miss Knight's unusual insight into business affairs. She has a wide acquaintance among brokerage circles and is considered by her employers as being much acumen in these matters.

The marriage will take place some time next Spring, according to present plans. Miss Knight will remain with Fields & Fay into this Summer. The members of the firm, while congratulating the girl on her romance which has come into her life, deplore the prospective departure from the office.

Mr. Neal is a member of the Boston City and Newtowne Clubs. He has not seen the old English home for ten years and looks forward with pleasure to taking his bride home to visit his own people.

PLAIN CHURCH WORK.

Boston Methodist Ministers to Consider Fall Duties.

Rev. Fayette L. Thompson, general secretary of the Methodist Brotherhood, will address a mass meeting for men at the Bromfield Street Methodist Church, May 23 at 7:30 p. m.

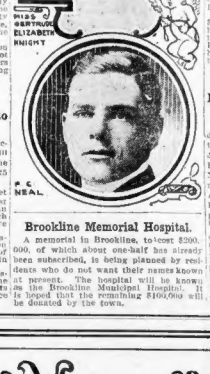
Boston Methodist preachers will meet the district superintendent in the First Church, on Temple street, May 11 to plan for the Fall work. The Methodist Church plans to do a larger and more aggressive work among the fighting of this city.

Rev. W. T. W. Divis of the First Congregational Church, Hyde Park, has been elected president of the Federation of Protestant Churches recently organized in that city.

Archdeacon, S. G. Babcock of the Episcopal Church will have charge of the affairs of the diocese of Massachusetts during the absence of Bishop Lawrence abroad.

HULL GIRL AND ENGLISHMAN SOON TO BE MARRIED

MISS GERTRUDE ELIZABETH KNIGHT



F. C. NEAL.

Brookline Memorial Hospital.

A memorial in Brookline, to cost $200,000, of which about one-half has already been subscribed, is being planned by residents who do not want their names known at present. The hospital will be known as the Brookline Municipal Hospital. It is hoped that the remaining $100,000 will be donated by the town.

'BIG BILL' KELIHER WILL TAKE STAND

Expected to Tell Whole Story of His Association With George W. Coleman.

William J. (Big Bill) Keliher will take the witness stand in his trial for aiding and abetting George W. Coleman in the looting of the Cambridge City National Bank and tell the whole story of his acquaintance with the high rolling bookkeeper.

The trial has been set for Wednesday morning, May 18, before Judge Hale. Lawyers Harvey H. Pratt and Daniel H. Coakley will defend Keliher.

It has been intimated that the story Keliher will tell on the stand will be of a sensational character and will show his acquaintance with Coleman in a different light than it has been pictured before the public in the past.

It is said to be the intention of Coleman to plead guilty and then he will take the witness stand and be used against Keliher. It is expected that there will be a clash in the testimony of the two men.

Coleman has told many stories about his association with Big Bill and earlier in the case, at least, he defended him, saying that Keliher had nothing to do with the bank robbery. Friends of Keliher say that they will be able to show that Coleman told certain falsehoods when he had hurt Big Bill and others $100,000.

The friends of Big Bill say that the $49,000 for the alleged stealing of which he and Coleman were jointly indicted was, in reality, money that Coleman lent to Big Bill, and it is claimed that Coleman has admitted it in a way that can be brought out in court.

PLAN FULLAM WEDDING.

Eight Hundred Invitations to Newport Ceremony.

NEWPORT, R. I., May 7.—Eight hundred invitations were sent out to-day for the wedding of Miss Marianna Fullam, daughter of Captain and Mrs. William F. Fullam, U. S. N., formerly of the Naval Training Station, but now in command of the battleship Mississippi, and Austin L. Sands, son of Mrs. Frederick Parker Sands of Greenough place, Newport, to take place Saturday, May 28, at noon in Trinity Church.

For her attendants Miss Fullam has chosen her sister, Miss Rhoda Fullam, as maid of honor. The six bridesmaids are: Miss Katharine F. Lawrence, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Prescott Lawrence of Newport; Miss Jeanne Wallach, daughter of Mrs. Barger-Wallach of New York; Miss Katherine McFadden, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Franklin McFadden of Philadelphia; Miss Ellen Rinehart of Baltimore. Harold Sands will be best man.

ZOO NEEDS GOATS, SAYS PROF. CARVER

Also a Few Cows and May Be a Horse, and a Sheep or Two.

The flies and hen will get neighborly when
Our zoo is established on up-to-date lines.
The buffalo wild and the moolie cow mild
Will chew the same turf neath the sheltering pines.
In that sweet by and by both the rhinoceri
And the carryall Dobbins will drink at one stream,
While the zebra will play with the lamb-
kin all day
And life will be one zoological dream.

—ANIMAL FANTASIES.

If the suggestion of Professor T. N. Carver of Harvard University concerning the proposed Franklin Park zoo is adopted, Bostonians may find the answer to the fierce old question: "Why is a hen?"

Professor Carver suggests that a collection of domestic animals will be a novel change from the usual run of zoo gaunty.

In place of the lordly antelope he would have the innocent lamb or a goat. He thinks that it is just as necessary to study the common moolie cow as it is to pursue the habits of the wild buffalo. He thinks that people do not know enough about the ox, the ass and other domestic animals.

He writes to Mayor Fitzgerald in part:

"It is safe to say that there is greater ignorance among our people regarding the domestic animals of the world than there is regarding the wild beasts of the forest.

"In the opinion of many thoughtful citizens Professor Carver has hit the zoological nail slam on the head. They ask:

"How many Boston men know the difference between a White Hamburg hen and a China duck? How many can tell you how long it takes a hen to hatch out chicks and what is the relating power of a month-old bull calf who is being led the way he doesn't wish to go?

"Many a Back Bay society girl can take a five-barred gate on her favorite hunter. They do it at Clyde Park every Country Club horse show. But, if these girls were sold to hustle Debbie into the carryall to get the doctor for baby has the collywobbles, like as not they would get the collar on wrong side up and would try to tie the tugs in a knot and loop them over the gunter.

Wouldn't Leave Burning Home.

Mrs. Charles S. Nason, sixty-five, refused to leave the house when it filled with smoke yesterday from a fire caused by a face curtain coming too close to a lamp at No. 9 Grant street. Somerville. She stuck to her room on the second floor, despite the entreaties of firemen and policemen. The damage is estimated at $2,000.

MOTHERS' DAY HERE, BOSTON PAYS HONOR

Sons All Over the Nation Observing Event; Recall Parents' oGod Deeds.

The credit for originating this day belongs to Miss Anna Jarvis of No. 2031 North Twelfth street, Philadelphia, who in 1906 commemorated the anniversary of her mother's homecoming. It occurred to her at the time that it would be a lovely tribute to motherhood if all persons upon a certain day would wear a white flower, preferably a carnation, and thus make the recognition universal. In two years the idea had spread over North America and other lands.

To-day nearly all the churches are observing the second Sunday in May as Mothers' Day.

The National Congress of Mothers at its last session in Washington, through its State representative, Mrs. Walter Lorenzo Smith of Malden, whose husband has charge of the Malden Commercial School, thus defined the purposes of the day:

To revive the dormant filial love and gratitude; to strengthen the home tie for the absent; to obliterate family estrangements; to create a band of brotherhood through the wearing of the floral badge; to brighten the lives of good mothers, and to make better children by getting closer to the hearts of good mothers.

Mrs. Smith will distribute hundreds of mothers' buttons among those who care to wear them, but in some quarters there is an objection to the buttons and the white carnation is urged.

The reason the carnation was chosen by the originator of this movement is that its whiteness stands for purity, its lasting qualities for faithfulness, its fragrance for love, its wide need of growth, charity, and its form, beauty.

Every person is asked to wear the flower to-day either to church or on the street. Churches of all denominations, Sunday schools, Y. M. C. A.'s, lodges, societies and other organizations have signified their willingness to observe the occasion in some simple way by wearing the white carnation, and those who can afford it are asked to send in mother's name a white carnation to every person in a sick room, hospital, almshouse, prison or orphanage.

Many of the churches to-day in Greater Boston will have large jars of these white carnations. After service it is proposed by ministers to send them to the absent ones, those who are "shut-ins," as well as to the very aged.

Mrs. Smith, who represents the Congress of Mothers in this State, is active in making the Christian bodies around observe the day, and will have read in some of the churches the letter which Rev. Dr. Wilbur Chapman, the evangelist, has written for the occasion.

GEORGE PROCLAIMED KING AS ALL ENGLAND GRIEVES OVER LOSS

RULER TO FOLLOW IN THE FOOTSTEPS OF HIS FATHER

probably has been prepared with the approval of the Prime Minister.

All the creeds united today in prayer for the repose of the soul of the dead King and the success of the new. St. Paul's Cathedral had unusually impressive services the Archbishop of Canterbury officiating. The Catholic churches of the realm were crowded, because the Catholic archbishop had called for special services on Sunday, hoping that the King might live through the two days until then. The sermons are all eulogistic.

The crowd have not ceased to gather about the palace. All day yesterday and through the night they stood at the palace door, every vacancy being quickly filled. There was nothing to see—just a little sheet of foolscap with the announcement of the death of their beloved king. The names of the four doctors in attendance were signed to it.

But every one wished to read for himself. The crowd was quiet, and when no one satisfied himself with reading the sad notice he stepped back and made room for the next. And so the line went on for hours and hours.

All England in Mourning.

Every person in England is wearing mourning of some sort. The official family is in black, and even the royal servants have donned the same color. But the humblest are wearing some mark of their sorrow. Little black ribbons and small pieces of crape are worn by those who cannot afford more. Every public office is at half staff, and every building has some sign of mourning.

Parliament was in session for a short time after the King took the oath. The Lords to swear allegiance to their new ruler. The Commons for some unexplained reason. The session of the Commons was

King George was occupied with affairs of state all day that he had not even time to call on the Dowager Queen, his mother, until late in the afternoon. He stayed at Marlborough House practically all the time, while those in charge of the arrangements for the procession of the new and the funeral of the old monarch came and went.

Family at Buckingham.

Later the members of the royal family began to arrive at Buckingham Palace. King George came with Queen Mary and two of his sons. The Lord Mayor of the corporation of London attended in state, while all the departments of state, the navy and the army were represented. High officials in all walks of life were also present throughout the day.

Before the palace a crowd watched those coming and going upon this sad errand, and soon storm drove to cover all but a few strangers, who remained to see the changing of the guard, which is the only effected without the accompaniment of a band of music. A special service was held at St. Paul's this afternoon and was almost national in character, despite the religious preparations. The Lord Mayor of the corporation of London attended in state while all the departments of state, the navy and the army were represented. Officials in all ranks of society were in the congregation, while special prayers were said upon the occasion of Queen Victoria's death.

The proclamation announcing the accession of King George was published prominently this afternoon before the college of the heralds. The king at arms of the Knights of the garter, Sir Alfred Scott Gatty, read the proclamation, the general congregation being under the charge of the Earl Marshal, Duke of Norfolk. The proclamation officially declared the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British dominions beyond the seas, King, Defender of the Faith and Emperor of India, upon whom we acknowledge all faith and constant obedience, and with all hearty and humble affection beseeching God, through whom kings and queens reign, to bless the royal King George V. with long and happy years to reign over us.

Given at the court of St. James, on this, the seventh day of May, anno dominie 1910.

posed to have a private opinion apart from that of his responsible advisers," but according to Mr. Walter Bagehot, the sovereign has numerous such rights, which seem to be virtually omnipotent. Parliament is powerless to pass any laws of any kind on any subject without the King's consent. The veto power of the sovereign is no sovereign has refused his assent to any bill sent up from the two Houses of Parliament. "He must sign his name, and his warrant if the two Houses unanimously send it up to him."

Such is the King in church and State. Such is the throne which will fall to the lot with a divine grace whose abiding delight is to do the will of God and to walk in His ways.

As the latter he is an impeccable, infallible, omnipotent and immortal action of the constitution, despite all his immense prerogatives cannot even have a single opinion of his own apart from that of his ministers. Now let us turn to see the king as he was when Edward the VII. was on the throne.

was the King in church and State. Such is the throne which will fall to the lot with a divine grace whose abiding delight is to do the will of God and to walk in His ways.

As the latter he is an impeccable, infallible, omnipotent and immortal action of the constitution, despite all his immense prerogatives cannot even have a single opinion of his own apart from that of his ministers. Now let us turn to see the king as he was when Edward the VII. was on the throne.

Edward Always Very Diplomatic

The first outstanding characteristic of the real King who has just died is his extraordinary good nature which was at once his chief characteristic and his besetting sin. He was so anxious to say pleasant things and do kind actions that he didn't always remember, in his desire to say things to one person to whom he was talking, that he might have said somewhat indiscreet things to a previous person with whom he had been in conversation.

This characteristic was even more pronounced in the Czar of Russia, of whom his enemies declare he is always of the same opinion as the last man with whom he talks.

"It is a waste of time trying to influence Edward," one of his friends said to me. "It is like writing on water. When you think you have made an impression upon him and he assents to you solemnly that he is of your opinion when you leave him in the greatest haste in the world comes in and makes his little joke and sneers at you and her, pretty soon a moment's reflection will show you that a prince thinks off on another tack and declares that the opinion which are minutes before he had expressed are worthless nutty nonsense."

This is an exaggeration no doubt, but it contains much truth.

I never met the king after he was king, but I met him many times when he came to the throne. On one occasion I had a long talk with him and got a very good opportunity of forming a conception of his character. The first thing that struck me was the extraordinary good nature and dominating nature of his mind. He stepped into the den on a hot plate from subject to subject.

Stead Leads the Prince.

It isn't etiquette on a first conversation with royalty or royalty always takes the lead, and you are supposed to follow. Now in the case of the King I found it absolutely impossible to get him to keep to the subject. He took it very well, I must admit. The habit of the man who has to fly off at a tangent in the middle of any conversation without being brought back to the point isn't good mental training.

I remember well the way in which the luncheon party was arranged. The Prince had asked me to come down one Sunday to meet him at tea. I wasn't in the habit of going up to town on Sundays, and, notwithstanding the unwritten law that the Prince's invitation is a royal command, I almost resolved upon not going, merely saying that I was very sorry, but if he wished to see me, he would have to go to Sandringham, as I was busy in London.

The idea it very graciously and said I was quite right, and so the luncheon was fixed. I first met the Prince at the house party and he said to me: "I want you to come very much because all the present company is only one person who dares to speak to the Prince as if he were only an ordinary mortal and tell him the exact truth. That person is myself. If he gets to know you there'll be two of us."

Had a Lively Argument.

We had hardly started talking before I found myself in a lively polemic with him on the subject of Madame Novikoff, concerning whom he was very prejudiced, and as I told him very ill-informed. The conversation grew so pleasantly that after a time I remembered my sins, and a long silence fell upon me. I had been guilty of a gross affront in the worst possible taste, and I could only ask the Prince's good reason to complain.

He was at the first public of Queen Victoria. I described the scene in the abbey in the Pall Mall Gazette from the vantage ground of the organ loft. I had written a leading article on the next day in disparagement of the service, which, most unwisely would last in England. I carried away the impression from the service of the previous day I had said that monarchy would last as long as the people let them went on.

That was a brutal thing to say, but the picture was so vivid before my mind's eye at the moment that I described the Prince of Wales and the Crown Prince of Germany as "the Emperor Frederick" that I dashed it off as the spirit of the moment, and then struck it out in proof. Unfortunately, my scathing editor protested against the omission and said it was the finest paragraph in the Pall Mall Gazette was boycotted at every London club but one. With him still fresh in my mind I remarked as we were smoking together alone: "Considering the awful things I have written about you in the past, it is rather odd that we should be smoking this friendly fashion."

Edward Bore No Grudge.

The Prince smiled and said "Oh, I'm a broad minded man and bear no grudge." So the incident passed, and I think the Prince said was quite true. He was a broad-minded man, and didn't bear grudges easily. In a few cases when he believed he had cause, I remember well at that same luncheon party, the Prince was somewhat long to himself because of the drawbacks of his position. But in the greater part he pressed life that his mother wouldn't let him take any part in affairs of state.

We had quite a good time discussing the secret services of Europe, which I found apparent to the Prince of England and subject as great interest to me. Finally I assured him I would not change with him for anything.

"I can quite understand that you are so long-suffering," he said.

It was always a sore point with the Prince that his mother would never let him do anything but merely attend ceremonial functions. He was kept in the background after his nephew, the Kaiser, came to the throne. It was the Kaiser, came to the throne. It was the Kaiser, came to the throne. It was

ROYALTY UPSET THE CITY

Ball in His Honor Almost Precipitated a Crisis in Governmental Affairs.

Of all the persons who met King Edward, then the Prince of Wales, on his visit to Boston in October, 1860, Samuel A. Green, physician, soldier, former Mayor of Boston, and now librarian of the Massachusetts Historical Society, probably has the most lasting impression. For he paraded in honor of the youthful Prince as surgeon of the Second Massachusetts, and later was an officer of the Massachusetts Historical Society, met the Prince at the society's rooms, which were then in Tremont street.

"It was on October 10 that the Prince came to the society's rooms," said Dr Green to an American reporter yesterday, "and it just happened that it was the anniversary of the fall of the British power in America, the fall of Cornwallis at Yorktown. I smiled at the time, because I happened to think of it as the Prince was examining some old pamphlets, but no one told him about it.

King at Harvard.

"The royal party, after visiting Harvard College and Bunker Hill Monument, came to the historical rooms, where they were received by a few other members of the society. The various curios and relics were shown to the distinguished visitors, and the whole affair passed off successfully.

"The Prince seemed to be very interested in the manuscript History of New England by Governor John Winthrop, which he examined with care, knowing that the author was the ancestor of our President.

"He also expressed an interest in Washington's epaulettes which were going to the museum of the society's rooms. At that time the epaulettes were kept with other objects of interest in the large show room, a handsome box was made especially for their keeping. Before the party left the rooms the Prince signed the visitors' register, and he called on his retinue to write their names also, which was accordingly done.

"I have often thought that it would be well if we framed that list of names and kept it as a permanent memento of the King's visit to this city.

"I recently opened the Register. The names of the party took up a full page. There were ten in the party, all distinguished men, and some of them well known in Boston, Francis Lowell, then the British consul in Boston.

King Edward's name led the list, written in a bold hand. There was no title with it. It simply read:

Albert Edward

Following it came these names

"The party seemed very much pleased with what they saw," Dr Green went on. "And spent some time looking around. The Prince at that time was not in its present flourishing condition, and we did not have so many interesting documents or relics as we have now.

"We were not the only ones honored with a visit. They went to Harvard University and other places in and about Boston. In fact he spent four days in the city, and in modern parlance there was 'something doing' every minute.

"But, to go back a little, you must consider that this Prince of Wales' visit to Boston, that once disgruntled and cantankerous town of Boston which turned its municipal back upon all British kings and princes was no ordinary affair.

"The entire party reached Boston about 4 o'clock in the afternoon of October 11. The Prince and suite were welcomed to the city at the Cottage Farm station, on the old Boston & Worcester road, by Mayor F. W. Lincoln and a committee of citizens, which consisted in part of Edward Everett, R. C. Winthrop, Josiah Quincy and Alex H. Rice. There were some bright local lights, as you will observe, in these distinguished names, and the Prince had with him, among others, Lord Lyons, the British Minister to the United States, the Duke of Newcastle, General Frederick Bruce and the Earl Kilmorman.

"The whole atmosphere was somewhat heavy and oppressive with the presence of so many royal and titled dignitaries, as well as with the presence of an unusual number of celebrities who were not ennobled, save by their own efforts in life, and Mayor Lincoln apparently appreciated the difficulty of the situation and bore himself like a martyr.

"As soon as the necessary introductions were accomplished, the cortege, preceded by cavalry, began a most imposing and extended march to the Revere House, where apartments still pointed out for the distinction of their association with royalty, were provided for all the notable strangers. The streets all along the line of march were crowded to overflowing, and the Prince and Mayor Lincoln received ovation after ovation, knowing that the author was the ancestor of our President.

"He also expressed an interest in Washington's epaulettes which were going to the museum of the society's rooms. At that time the epaulettes were kept with other objects of interest in the large show room, a handsome box was made especially for their keeping. BRITISH HERE PLAN MEMORIAL SERVICE

A meeting of the executive committee of the Victorian Club was held last night at 8 Ashburton place, and a committee appointed to attend a memorial service in connection with other British societies to be held in the city of Boston on May 19, the day set apart for the memorial services for King Edward in the various churches.

The committee sent the following cablegram to Queen Alexandra:

Boston, May 7, 1910.

To Queen Alexandra, London, Eng.:

The officers and members of the Victorian Club mourn with you and the nation

(Signed) B. B. USHER President.

The British organizations in the city are: The British Charitable Society, British Naval and Military Veterans' Association, Intercolonial Club, Victoria Club, Canada Club and The Sons of St. George.

Pleasant memories of King Edward were recalled last night by members of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery, who met in an armory they visited London fourteen years ago. The King, who was then the Prince of Wales, made a great impression upon the Bostonians because of his democratic ways.

Colonel Sidney M. Hedges, who was the commander of the famous Boston organization, and who was introduced to him by Ambassador Reid, had this to say of the King:

"We talked several minutes and I was most favorably impressed by the King's gracious personality. He surprised me by his cordiality and, at the outset, he made me feel perfectly at ease.

"Others were waiting in line to meet the King and as I started to move along he said in a kindly tone, 'Now, don't be in a hurry, Colonel Hedges.' There is plenty of time, and you know I don't have the pleasure of meeting an American every day.'

"I did not feel as though I was talking with the greatest monarch in the world. He carried on a pleasant, offhand style of conversation and was decidedly democratic in his manner.

"Henry S. Patterson, first president of the Mayflower Club, said: 'I met the King in 1886 and, like all who were there at the time, I have the greatest admiration for the man.'

Colonel Henry Walker of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company was presented to King Edward several times and was in London for the coronation.

"King Edward was democratically royal and royally democratic," said the colonel. "He showed his pleasure at meeting me when he said: 'I am glad to find that we have brethren on the other side who care to come to see us.'

"The next time I saw the King was in 1905, when I was commander-in-chief. He attended a dinner given by the Ancients at St. John's Hall, at which time I was presented to him by Ambassador Reid. He was quite democratic in his manner."

His natural, kind, with his broad experience of life, enabled him to lift Great Britain out of her isolation existing at the beginning of his reign to her present position as one of the predominating powers of Europe. I feel that he was always friendly to the idea of home rule for Ireland.

Take it first article: "I believe that as far as the subjects of the Irish people in Ireland are concerned, in Canada and elsewhere there is no wish of King Edward's heart that they should not be most pleased with the liberal powers that are granted them and I am glad of our visit."

Rev. Dr. Geo. A. Myers of Temple Israel: "King Edward had done well to follow the example of his illustrious mother and, in the words of Shakespeare, 'wear his honors in the hearts of his subjects,' as he has been a great and good king."

John F. Masters, president of the British Charitable Society: King Edward has always appeared to us as a gentleman with all the many noble attributes of heart and head of such a man. Such a King His qualities of gentleness, promptness and generosity always did the proper thing at the opportune moment, and endeared him to his people."

LONDON THANKED BY ALEXANDRA FOR CITY'S SYMPATHY

LONDON, May 7.—Queen Alexandra today sent to the citizens of London her personal thanks for their consideration. This was contained in a telegram to the Lord Mayor of London, reading:

"Buckingham Palace.

"I am deeply touched by your telegram of sympathy on the loss of London. How greatly I appreciate it it is impossible to express when I say words cannot feel that my sorrow and grief are shared by them and by the whole nation.

"ALEXANDRA."

The telegram was sent in response to a message sent early in the day by the Lord Mayor.

In her affliction the Queen Queen is cheered by the ministrations of her favorite daughter, Princess Victoria, who has not left her side night or day since Edward was stricken.

KING COURAGEOUS AS THE END CAME

Edward, Devoted to Peace, Transacted Business Almost Until His Death.

LONDON, May 7.—The Times this morning prints the following editorial under the caption "Death of the King":

"King Edward VII is no more. Loyal and reverent as the use of a ruler is respected, so beloved, would have been ours. The suddenness with which it has fallen upon us makes the shock the more overpowering to us all. Until the very last he showed the courage of his royal race, a quality he has often proved that he possessed in a signal degree. He continued to transact business almost to the end. He was actually engaged with Lord Knollys as late as yesterday.

"Remorseless was his devotion to the cause of peace. His Liberal colleagues did the best to save for him that blessing which he loved in the good sight of God. During his reign the cause of peace has been perfectly safe in the matter of [illegible] Fewer still have possessed in an equal degree the fine art of employing them [illegible]

200 LOVE LETTERS OF MRS. HAMILTON PAINE WILL BE READ IN COURT

Daulby, a London Tailor's Son, Posing as Comte de Gatigny Plans a Revenge.

HAS TELL-TALE MISSIVES

Two Hundred Tropical Billets-doux From Boston Widow to Be Read in Open Court.

By VANCE THOMPSON.

Special Cable to Boston American

PARIS, May 7.—H. Daulby, son of a London tailor, who posed as the Count de Gatigny and sold a whole gallery of spurious old and young masters to Mrs. Hamilton Paine, of Boston, copper king, has spent his defence to his London and Paris lawyers. His wife, who was formerly Miss Leigh of Boston, aided him in its preparation.

The defence consists of two parts. Part the first will consist of the rendering open court of 200 love letters which Daulby says he received from the beautiful white-haired widow. Part the second will be a critical examination of the pictures and terms of sale. The lawyers are now going over the 200 letters, and portions of these letters are now known, owing, it is said, to the indiscretion of the "Countess," for some of the letters fell into the hands of the former Boston belle.

For a while she [illegible] husband's head by her [illegible] Police of her arrested she decided [illegible] revenge upon "the woman who not only stole my husband's love, but sent me to prison."

An Angry Wife's Revenge.

Otherwise this package of perfumed letters would have been used in a divorce suit against the "Count" instead of being part of his defence against Mrs. Paine's charges.

The letters are written with a warmth more Parisian than Bostonian and are studded with such gems as "precious presence," "constant adoration," "languorous eyes," "long looked for affinity," "when there is union."

Then there is a woman from Shelley's "Love's Philosophy," beginning "See the mountains kiss the high heavens and the waves clasp one another," and ending "What are all these kissings worth, if thou kiss not me?"

In fact, the letters are dotted with eruptive spots of poetry. The letters cover a period of several years, and the bogus Countess argues for their authenticity by pointing out that many were written from San Moritz, where Mrs. Paine has been in the habit of passing the Winter, some dated Paris and others mailed from different parts of Italy at the time when Mrs. Paine made a motor trip through that country. Several were written from the steamship Ivernia.

The care with which the bogus Count numbered and preserved these letters suggests that he kept them for use as a weapon against the writer. He even had duplicate typewritten copies made. It is understood that Mrs. Paine's lawyers will argue that the letters are garbled or outright forgeries.

Questions of High and Low Art.

The second part of Daulby's defence, which concerns the pictures, states that he did not guarantee the authenticity of all the pictures. He pointed out that a copy may sometimes be as valuable as the original. For instance, he says, there are copies of the old masters by Eugene Delacroix which are of great value. Daulby adds that he offered no false signatures, but merely sold the pictures in the same state as he bought them, and that who forged the signatures is a query now impossible to answer. Some of the pictures, he adds, belong to the first manner or youthful period of the artists, and that experts were unable to identify them. He says the very size of my bills is proof of my sincerity."

Finally he intimates that his bills were higher because they covered musical compositions which he showed Mrs. Paine to present as the product of her own musical genius, and which were sung by Maggie Teyte of the Opera Comique to the enthusiastic applause of Mrs. Paine's guests. He supposed they were applauding the compositions of their hostess.

Legal confrontation will take place at Tours a fortnight hence. This means that Mrs. Paine and the Count de Gatigny will meet face to face in court. Hundreds of Parisians, if the ceremony is public, will flock to Tours to witness the sensational encounter.

Snow in Maine.

BANGOR, May 7.—Snow and bitter cold weather have been making life strenuous for the residents of northern Maine this week, and even in Bangor there was a report snow squall on Thursday. Three inches of snow fell in Aroostook, and the temperature has been close to zero. Farming and log driving operations have been greatly hindered.

Second Baseman McConnell Rallies After Appendicitis Operation.

"Resting comfortably and on the road to recovery," was the gist of a report given out last night by Dr. W. A. Brooks, Jr., regarding the condition of Ambrose McConnell, the Red Sox second baseman, who underwent an operation for appendicitis at the Methodist Hospital, No. 172 Newbury street, yesterday, at 10 o'clock.

"Mr. McConnell's constitution will pull him through," said Dr. Brooks, "if found him suffering from inflammation of the appendix and the operation was very successful."

Boys Throw Blazing Papers at Brockton Child.

BROCKTON, May 7.—Josephine Bolles, five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Bell, of North Montello street, this city, is dying at her home as the result of a joke played on her by small boys to-day. Josephine was romping about with a number of small children when boys around a bonfire threw lighted papers at her. Her dress blazed up and she was terribly burned.

TOWN OF GREENFIELD THREATENED BY A $100,000 FIRE

Aid Rushed from Nearby Places Helps to Keep Down the Loss.

SPARKS FIRE MANY HOMES

Storehouse and Bridge Gone as Flames Sweep the Business Section.

GREENFIELD, May 7. A disastrous fire spreading from the Mill street district over the Green river this afternoon burned out a strip of business and residential territory of Greenfield, measuring three-quarters of a mile long and a quarter of a mile wide, with a total loss of which is $100,000. For two hours the fire threatened the destruction of the entire business section of Greenfield, and burned out a number of large business establishments, besides rendering the bridge a total wreck.

Lewis A. Ames & Co., wholesale grocers, doing business in Western Massachusetts, were the largest individual sufferers, losing $90,000, when their mammoth storehouse went up in smoke and flame. It is said this loss is covered by insurance.

Out of Town Help Called.

Help was summoned from North Hampton and Turner's Falls, the visitors helping considerably to keep the loss so low.

An investigation of the origin of the fire has already been started, and it is now believed the careless dropping of a cigar butt onto the old Mill street viaduct caused the fire. The bridge was dry as tinder, and burned rapidly, and is now a total loss.

For two hours all traffic was held up as [illegible] been cut off by the Connecticut River and Fitchburg divisions of the Boston & Maine Railroad.

At midnight the firemen were still at work in a dozen different parts of the town pouring water onto the smouldering timbers.

Business men, the police and selectmen formed a border brigade to assist when the flames raged this afternoon, and many householders piled streams onto their homes from nothing longer than garden hose.

Already Plan New Bridge.

The old bridge will probably be replaced with a new structure of steel. The damage to the bridge is $45,000. The Green River Grist Mill was burned with a loss of $8,500 and the stock inside owned by Potter & Son was ruined at a loss of $8,000. The other buildings destroyed and losses are: Barn filled with hay, owned by John Mead, $3,500; dwelling house nearby, $1,200; warehouse of Lacy & Abercrombie, loss $60,000; storage house of Potter & Son, $5,000; half a dozen dwelling houses and John D. Riley's barn, about fifty buildings [illegible] in various parts of the city, but the fires were put out without great damage.

GLIDDEN FAILS TO FLY.

Kept Down By Gale, Will Break in Aviators.

PITTSFIELD, May 7.—On account of the thirty-mile gale which blew across Acra Field this afternoon, Charles J. Glidden of Boston made no attempt to make a scheduled flight in the balloon "Boston." Although the balloon was spread on the ground, it was not inflated.

An attempt to qualify Jay D. Benton of Boston and J. Walter Fluer of Worcester as pilots will be made in the next flight by Glidden. On the get away Benton will take charge of the balloon. After an hour in the air, a landing will be attempted. Fluer will walk about the balloon and will enter the basket and take charge. He will then pilot the balloon and attempt to make a landing.

SOUTHBRIDGE BANK COMMITTEE TO URGE DRASTIC REFORMS

Annual Certified Audits and Check on Loans Among Recommendations.

TRUSTEES MUST [illegible] WORK

Quarterly Report of All Business Also Advised; Press Followed $500,000 Theft.

DRASTIC changes in the savings bank laws, recommended by the South Bridge Investigating Committee, will be fought tooth and nail in the House and Senate, it was said last night, by representatives of the united savings banks of the State.

The banks it is said, are particularly opposed to the recommendations of the Cavanaugh Committee that Boards of investment must be[illegible] ing [illegible] to the full board of trustees, once every three months, a detailed statement of all loans, all changes of security or security pledged or the rate of interest charged, and all purchases or sales of stock or notes since the last [illegible] quarterly meeting.

Neither the savings bank treasurer nor any member of the board of investment shall be a member of the auditing committee.

Expert Audit Every Year.

Once every year the auditing committee shall employ a public accountant, not connected with the bank and "certified" by the commissioner. He shall make a thorough examination for the period elapsed since the previous audit and an accurate trial balance of the depositors' ledger. A report in detail must be rendered by the auditing committee at the next meeting of the trustees and filed and preserved [illegible] records. Within ten days [illegible] copy [illegible] be sent to the commissioner at the State House.

If the auditing committee fails to have this audit made, and trial balance taken, the Commissioner shall have it done by a certified public accountant approved by him, the expense to be paid by the bank.

The Bank Commissioner shall have power to recommend the removal of any trustee, officer or employe who, in his opinion, has abused his trust or has been negligent. If the trustees fail to remove him, a board made up of the State Treasurer, the Attorney General and the Tax Commissioner may remove him after hearing.

Report to Be Unanimous.

Whenever a trial balance is made the auditing committee must send to each depositor, whose deposit book hasn't been handed in within one year, a statement showing the balance due him.

The Cavanaugh Committee will file its complete report to the Legislature on Tuesday of this week. To the apparent surprise of nearly everybody at the State House the report will be unanimous. The committeemen are in one mind concerning the lessons that Massachusetts savings banks people, savings banks depositors and State officials ought to learn from the $500,000 theft of John A. Hall from the Southbridge Savings Bank.

To Criticize Chapin.

The report to be submitted the day after to-morrow will be scorching hot in its judicial reflections on the manner in which the trustees of the Southbridge Savings Bank performed the trust which was reposed in them by the millhands, factory-workers and small farmers of Worcester County. That trust, the way the committeemen look at it, has cost the savings bank depositors at least 15 cents on the dollar, because the trustees were not alive to their duties.

To the great surprise of some others the report of the committee will say some harsh things concerning the administration of the office of Savings Bank Commissioner of Massachusetts. The present Commissioner is former State Treasurer Arthur B. Chapin, former Mayor of Holyoke. Commissioner Chapin has been in office about a year. His friends were looking for something mild from the Cavanaugh Committee. They will be disappointed.

The attitude of one hundred savings bank men who crowded into the committee room at the State House to hear the "authors" reading of the recommendations has intimated that the savings banks will fight these recommendations every inch of the way through Senate and House.

NEW HAVEN MEN FIRM IN DEMAND

Railroad Compromise Offer Is Rejected; Meeting Will Be Held To-morrow.

NEW HAVEN, May 7.—Although no threat of a general strike accompanies the refusal of 10,000 shop and mechanical trades workmen on the New Haven road to accept the offer of 6 per cent. advance in wages, labor conditions on the entire system are said to be serious. These men are standing out for an eight-hour day and an advance of six cents an hour. The six per cent. offered by the management amounts to one and a half cents an hour.

Eight trades are involved in this demand. They are well organized and are acting together in what is known as the Federated Trades Council. The machinists and their helpers beat the list. Then comes the blacksmiths and their helpers, the boilermakers, steamfitters, car-workers, upholsterers, packers and carmen. Fully one-third of the men are employed at the Readville shops, and the compromise settlement offered by the management was rejected almost unanimously.

In addition to this complication is the demands of the railroad telegraphers.

Meanwhile, the outcome of the next meeting of the adjustment committee of the Federated Trades Council and the management of the New Haven Railroad is awaited with interest. This meeting is scheduled for Monday. The refusal of the shop and mechanical-trades workmen to accept the compromises offer made by the New Haven will be brought up for further discussion at that time.

1,000 REPORTED SLAIN.

Thibetans Said to Have Massacred Chinese Garrison.

PEKIN, May 7.—A report was received here to-day that the Thibetans at Lhassa have revolted and massacred 1,000 Chinese comprising the garrison.

A short time ago a force of European trained soldiers was sent to the sacred city of the Lamas and that quarter took no part. The presence of the "foreign" Chinese was resented by the dwellers in the Forbidden City and a revolution planned to restore the Thibetan Pope to his throne.

They were accompanied by members of the California Congressional delegation. The President invited them to [illegible] next Wednesday. The party will go to New York tomorrow.

Deplores the Action of Tufts Trustees in Barring Women From College.

BY DOROTHY AMES.

MRS. JULIA WARD HOWE, the great-est champion of her sex in the world, deplores the recent action by the trustees of Tufts College in converting the school from a co-educational institution to a college for male students only. Women, and everywhere to have an equal opportunity with men, she thinks.

Mrs. Howe received me with the graciousness for which she is noted. She made a beautiful picture in her white lace cap and lavender gown, one arm resting on a table covered with books and magazines. A large oil lamp gave a soft, pleasing light. Directly in back, a most appropriate background, was a book case filled with the classics and standard works.

"I understand," said Mrs. Howe after the first greetings, "that you want my ideas on this co-educational subject. You know I never give newspaper interviews. I have not done so for about ten years—gave it up long ago. But I will talk with you about this."

Mrs. Howe speaks slowly and deliberately, in a clear, strong voice.

"Tufts Action Unfortunate."

"It seems to be most unfortunate that Tufts College has abolished co-education, for I believe that co-education is very necessary for the good of both sexes, and more than that, I feel that the women have a right to the higher instruction obtainable in a college for men.

"I feel that women in general and the alumnae of co-educational colleges should do something about it, either an effort to induce Tufts to reconsider or some movement to prevent the action becoming widespread.

"Co-education effects a balance of the two sexes, mentally, morally and spiritually. I always have believed in the union of both men and women on any big subject, especially education. If I were appointing a committee, I should always have men and women serve. The result is much better than a committee of either one alone. Men and women supplement each other in any line of work. Where the two are brought together there is a better balance of mind. I do not see how it is to understand just what some co-educational enthusiasts have in an objection to the women's colleges. I believe that colleges for women alone are very necessary. To make a [illegible] against women's colleges in this fight for co-education would be most unkind and unfair. Certain types of girls are much better off and make much better progress in their studies in colleges for women only. The standard [illegible] duction is very high and the [illegible] an impetus to lofty thoughts and [illegible] ...

"Co-education Is Required."

"But just as the women's colleges have succeeded and serve their purpose, just so are co-educational schools urgently required. In the first place they offer a high grade of instruction at very low rates. The college life is broadening, equally as much so for the men as for the women, although, to be sure, the women benefit greatly by the stimulus of competition.

"I feel that to be successful in working for co-education we must approach the problem in just the right manner. I feel that that manner would be [illegible] action. I am not so sure that we can accomplish it by sheer insistence of will. Some women seem to be successful in that way. Personally I have always felt that I would almost prefer to give up my [illegible]

MASS MEETING OF FARMERS IN MILK WAR TOMORROW

Thousands of Producers Will Assemble in Faneuil Hall and Later in the Day Will Storm State House for Square Deal

Both Sides Deny All Rumors of Compromise; Secretary Hunter Urges Producers of New England to Stand Firm in Fight

A BIG mass meeting in Faneuil Hall by the milk producers of New England has been arranged for to-morrow. Circulars were sent to 5,000 farmers in New England and New York yesterday asking that they come to Boston and help make the Faneuil Hall meeting a great demonstration of the fight of the striking milk producers. It is expected that there will be an attendance of at least 2,000.

The purpose of the meeting is also to impress upon the consumers of Boston that the milk producers are justified in the stand they have taken.

Addresses will be made by Professor J. W. Sanborn of Gilmanton, N. H., the largest milk producer in New England and former professor at the New Hampshire State College; Secretary J. Lewis Ellsworth of the State Board of Agriculture; N. J. Batchelder, Master of the National State Grange of the United States; Representative Charles M. Gardner, Master of the Massachusetts State Grange and other prominent men.

The meeting will begin at 10 o'clock and last until 1, when it is planned for the producers to march in a body to the State House and appear before the legislative committee that has been appointed to probe the milk situation to the bottom. The appearance of so many farmers at the State House is expected to make a big sensation on Beacon Hill.

No Compromise, Says Hunter.

Producers and contractors yesterday denied knowledge of any proposition to compromise, although there was a persistent rumor to that effect. In the presence of President Stanley H. Abbott of the Boston Co-operative Milk Producers' Company, Secretary W. A. Hunter said:

"We have received no overtures to compromise. But this is a producers' fight, and the producers would have to compromise, anyway. Instead of receiving plans to settle the fight, we are rather being assured by farmers of their continued support and are being urged to prepare for months more of the strike.

"There has been no intimation from me that the producers are weakening. Rather, the assurances are being received that we are stronger than ever. We may have to keep the fight up two months longer. The feeling is strong for unity all over New England. I think that if there were a settlement, there would be farmers who would refuse further to ship their milk in to Boston.

"But we are not going to compromise."

Charles H. Hood & Company, one of the big contractors, gave out the following statement:

Says Farmers Are United.

"There is no talk of compromise from the contractors. We don't want to compromise. We are getting all the milk we want and more, too."

In conference yesterday with Secretary Hunter were President Abbott of Whitman, N. H.; First Vice-President John K. Mills of Northboro, and H. T. Barrows of Littleton, of the Boston Co-operative Milk Producers' Association.

All of them brought encouraging reports from their districts. President Abbott declared the farmers are standing together everywhere throughout New England, and that the producers will certainly win the strike.

While Mr Mills and Mr. Barrow were standing in front of the American House, George H. Whiting, one of the big contractors, passed. He stepped into the door to greet his two friends. Salutations were exchanged. The contractor shook hands with the producers, and all stated they felt fine, expected to win and were fighting for principle.

Help Comes From Maine.

Secretary Hunter yesterday received a letter from J. B. Huling, secretary of the Maine Farmers' Protective Association, stating that farmers in Maine are behind the other producers in their fight with the Boston contractors. Following the receipt of the letter, Secretary H. utter telegraphed Mr. Bunting to hurry to Turner's Centre, Me., and order the farmers to pull all milk off the market that has been shipped to Boston. It is said that Turner's Centre has been supplying milk to Boston.

S. D. Scott of Newport, Vt., sent word yesterday to Boston that the Newport association producers are [illegible] strike against the contractors as [illegible] Boston contractors are paying a base $1.56 per Cwt. to collect one can of milk in the Newton section.

There Is Exceptional Value in Used

Packard MOTOR CARS

"ASK THE MAN WHO OWNS ONE"

WHAT THEY ARE

Packard cars of recent models that have been exchanged by Packard owners in part payment for new Packards.

WHAT MAKES THEM GOOD

In the first place they are Packards, and a Packard is never out of date. In the second place, they are thoroughly overhauled and repainted as soon as I get them. I never try to sell a used Packard until it has been made like new in efficiency, style and finish. They are fully equipped.

GUARANTEE

SERVICE

I have a service building, which contains 122,000 square feet of floor space and employs over 300 men. It cost me $300,000. I built it to be able to properly take care of all Packard cars in my territory and thereby take care of my customers, the wonderful reputation of the Packard and my own future in the motor car business in New England.

This service building is more than a place to repair, repaint and overhaul motor cars. It is Dodge store of a staff of Packard factory experts whose business it is to see that all Packard owners get the highest efficiency in the daily use of their cars.

This service is for purchasers of used Packards just the same as for purchasers of new Packards.

Now is the time to buy a used Packard and get the highest class car at a moderate cost. The new 1910 Packards are all sold.

NAMED SECRETARY OF TOURING CLUB

Elliott Quits the A. A. A. for Post With Other Association.

Frederick H. Elliott has resigned as secretary of the American Automobile Association in order to be free to accept a similar position with the Touring Club of America. For three years Mr. Elliott has been identified with the A. A. A., during which he has become widely known to motorists all over the country.

His success in organization work, in stimulating the rapidly increasing interest in the good roads movement, supplemented more recently by the energetic campaign he has carried on in co-operation with Charles Thadeus Terry, for a national registration law, are well known to all who are in the automobile business.

Mr. Elliott as secretary of the Touring Club of America has been elected to the board of directors and will therefore be actively identified with every detail of its management.

Coincident with this important change comes the announcement that the Touring Club of America has leased commodious quarters in West 57th street, New York city, which have been fitted up for the club and offer exceptional accommodations provided for studying routes and all the other touring facilities provided by the club.

MARMON WINS IN STOCK CAR RACES

The consistent work of the Marmon car has been a prominent feature in all the contests in which it has appeared since it first became a factor in the racing world. Its latest performance was a victory over a Mercer competitor in the Marmon is a car of speed and endurance.

At a three days' meet in the Southern city the regular stock car showed its paces. "How I Would Make the Kiddies Happy If I Were Very Rich."

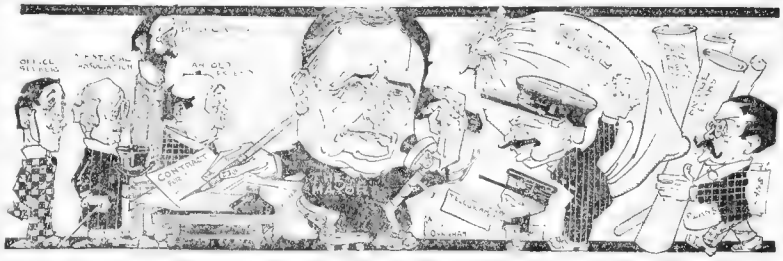
DRAWN BY NELL BRINKLEY.

ALL aboard, kiddies, for a jolly ride in my new motor boat! You didn't know I had a [illegible]? Well, I have, and it's the stuffy store forever and enjoy life with you. It will be a fine boat, too—all shining with copper and [illegible] will go oh, so fast! Down the Charles we'll go skimming every fair day, and we'll never turn our faces toward the old stuffy shops or even the harbor where the salt spray will sting our faces and we can [illegible] the breath of the ocean

HOW WOULD YOU LIKE TO BE THE MAYOR?



BOSTON has been [illegible] Mayor for [illegible] who has held [illegible] Colonel [illegible] ner on the second floor [illegible] right.

From the moment that [illegible] Mayor's inner office general[illegible] till long after the [illegible] inner sanctum.

There is always somebody waiting to see the city's chief executive and there is constantly something pertaining to the city's affairs occupying his attention, and when John F. at the end of a busy day says "Let's quit, Dick," it is not on record that Colonel [illegible]

Private [illegible] covered [illegible] less [illegible] call the [illegible] idea of what one will see on an [illegible] day while the chief executive is on [illegible] the job.

Enter Colonel Field [illegible] the Mayor wants they are [illegible] hangs up his coat and hat and [illegible] toward his desk.

"There is a delegation of [illegible] the ——'s within that [illegible] take only [illegible] you [illegible]

"Why [illegible]

Mayor [illegible]

The [illegible] Mayor [illegible] more [illegible] a bad [illegible] pet [illegible] d [illegible] up [illegible] de [illegible] W [illegible] co [illegible] tra [illegible] you [illegible] be [illegible] sho [illegible] beg [illegible] just [illegible] that [illegible]

The next most important man to H[illegible] If one is the Colonel. He had the title of colonel conferred on him at the [illegible] the last Fitzgerald [illegible] back, when the [illegible] Mayor [illegible] ning for [illegible] [illegible] year.

The [illegible] fourth, a man [illegible] he is liable to say "No" when you ask if the Mayor is in and still not mean it. He has his own little troubles. His is the pleasant task of meeting the majority of the bunch that are looking for jobs and one day with the Colonel would convince anybody that it's no cinch to send them all away happy. Most [illegible] them depart [illegible] ding [illegible]

Yet if one has any real business with the Mayor it is a comparatively simple matter to get by the Colonel, gate and into the inner sanctum. That is one reason why Mayor Fitzgerald is such a busy man. He does many times himself that his predecessor was willing to leave to their subord[illegible]

The [illegible] is an exception that the Mayor gets away before 6.59 p. m. Many times it is at as late as 9 p. m. After the doors are closed and the council has departed the Mayor tends to his correspondence and that alone is a job that requires quite a bit of [illegible]

If you think that being Mayor of [illegible] a year is an easy job, you should watch Mayor Fitzgerald at work. Better try it one you would pat [illegible] on the back and say you had an easy job.

For the next twenty minutes the Lawrence and the commissioners are [illegible] Mayor's attention is closely occupied in an animated discussion on the development of Park Square and the [illegible] conference with "Charlie" Logue, [illegible] the Park Path of the first Fitzgerald Mayor portrays such enthusiasm for [illegible] the present one. THE NEWEST JOKES BY THE COMEDIANS

By Cliff Gordon, "The German Senator."

THOSE [illegible] Let [illegible] selves. A [illegible] anything [illegible] today).

THE worst [illegible] about our times is [illegible] was prices are going [illegible] Why, pretty soon meat will be worth more than money. The time will soon come when we'll be carrying meat around in our pockets instead of money. When we go to buy anything, a hat for instance, and ask the price, the clerk will say: "That sells for two pounds and a half of beefsteak. We'll give him three pounds and get back a pork chop and a couple of sausages for change.

[illegible]

I [illegible] look for the good of poor, suffering mankind. But I'd like to see you get a nickel of it.

MR. ROCKEFELLER'S son conducts a Sunday school class. Every Sunday he gets the boys together and tells them how to make money. If he told them now as a father made his, it would break up the class.

ONE of the greatest pests of our day is the man who tells you to "own your own home." He explains what a beautiful place he can build for you, trees in front, yard in the back and a mortgage all over it. Cheaper than paying rent, he says. "I'll sell you a place like that for ten thousand dollars, and you can pay two thousand down and a nickel a week." After you've paid for it, then you can enjoy the rest of your life. Then he takes you down to the shore and sells you a lot when the tide's out. A little later you come back and find a fellow fishing on it.

WOMEN here have the advantage of those in England, anyway. Over there a man won't marry unless the woman has a thousand pounds. Over here a man is lucky if he gets a hundred and ten.

THEY'LL tell us, if there is a war, to be patriotic and go to the front and fight. But they only pay the soldiers $13 a month. Think of it! Forty-nine cents a day for a man to go out and get shot. Why, it ain't enough to go out and get half shot on.

DON'T think for a minute that Uncle Joe Cannon will be forced out of the Speakership. The insurgents have had him in the last ditch so long that he has taken root there.

AND who wants to see Uncle Joe retired, anyway? It's a good thing for the country for Congress to have somebody to quarrel with. When they're busy fighting "Uncle Joe" they can't be passing any more tariff laws to rob the people.

THEY'VE been having trouble over woman suffrage up on Beacon Hill, too. If women get the right to vote, it will be a great thing for the poor married man. Instead of two dollars on election day, he'll get four.

CUPID SETS PACE AS MAY AND JUNE RUN BRIDAL RACE

Time-Honored Tradition That Present Month Is One of Ill-Luck for Those Who Set Sail on Matrimonial Tide, Does Not Daunt Boston Brides-Elect, and Many Weddings Are in Prospect.

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

WHILE the social boriga is rosy with [illegible] bridals, May-time nuptials are proving exceptionally important. Engagements too numerous to mention point to the supposition that keeping count of them is rather a difficult task, for in the Spring it seems the whole world's fancy "lightly turns to thoughts of love," and so we will undoubtedly be showered from now on with engagement announcements and wedding cards.

Miss Lorraine Roosevelt is one of the many society girls who this year seem to prefer the trailing arbutus of the unlucky May-time to the roses of propitious June for their bridals, and she has set on next Saturday for her marriage to Langdon Warner of Beacon street.

Mr. Warner is such a prominent member of our most exclusive set and Miss Roosevelt is so well known among our best families that the Boston attendance at the wedding will be large. The ceremony takes place at "Wardick," Oyster Bay, L. I., the country home of the bride's mother, Mrs. J. West Roosevelt.

The ceremony will be performed by the Rev. Theodore C. Williams of Boston, and the bride will be given in marriage by her brother, Oliver Wolcott Roosevelt, who is a sophomore at Harvard and a member of Battery A.

Miss Roosevelt's late father, J. West Roosevelt, was a cousin of ex-President Roosevelt. Her mother was Miss Emily Schermerhorn, a member of an old French family of New York.

Mr. Warner is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Warner of Beacon street. His mother was Miss Margaret Storer, and his grandmother a sister of Senator Hoar. He is a graduate of Harvard 1903, and a member of the Tavern Club. He has travelled extensively in the East and is an authority on Japanese art. He is assistant director of the Museum of Fine Arts.

FAIR COUSIN TO BE AN ATTENDANT.

The bride has chosen for her attendants Miss Margaret Roosevelt, a cousin; Miss Janet Dana and Miss Ruth Draper, both of whom are well known here; Miss Laura Chanler, also of New York, and Miss Alice Parker of Washington, a relative of Mrs. Ronald Lyman and Henry Parkman of Boston.

Roger Sherman Warner will be his brother's best man, and the ushers chosen are Dr. Francis W. Peabody and William James, Jr., of Cambridge; Gardiner H. Perry, a son of Mrs. Charles F. Perry of Beacon street, who takes his home in New York; Nicholas Roosevelt of Philadelphia and New York and Messrs. Ralph and Arthur Page, James S. Pitkin and Whitcomb Field, most of them classmates of Mr. Warner, Harvard '03.

Another out-of-town bride whose marriage is of unusual interest to the fashionables here is Miss Madeline Borland, who has also chosen May for her wedding and on the 17th is to marry Clarence Pell at the Church of the Incarnation in New York.

A large family connection will go over from Boston for the occasion, among them being Mrs. James Jackson, the bride's favorite aunt; Mrs. George C. Lee, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Herbert H. Hallowell, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Abbott and the Misses Juliet and Barbara Higginson. Miss Borland's father is of the fine old Boston family of that name, so naturally the wedding interests a large circle here. Miss Borland has kept in close touch with our younger set here through her frequent visits and is quite a favorite with the smartest young set in town.

Miss Borland has chosen for her attendants her sister, Miss Alice Borland, whose marriage to M. Orme Wilson, Jr., is set for June 8th, and the Misses Helen Coster, Priscilla Stanton and Lelia Haven, a cousin. Mr. Pell will have his cousin, Griswold Lorillard, as his best man, and the list of ushers includes Arthur Russell, Richmond Talbot, Charles F. Brown, M. Orme Wilson, Jr., Morton Newhall of Providence and Charles Leonard of Boston. A reception will follow the ceremony at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Borland, on East Thirty-seventh street. Miss Borland's sister, Alice Borland, and Orme Wilson, Jr., will be married on June 2 at the same church.

ELIZABETH SHAW GREENE WEDS MAY 21.

May 21 is the date set for the wedding of pretty Elizabeth Shaw Greene, daughter of the late William Batchelder Greene of Boston and Dinard France, and Samuel Eliot Morison, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. John Morison (Emily Lloid) of Brimmer street.

The affair will be one of the largest of the season in town, and will take place in Trinity Church at noon.

Miss Greene is a member of the Vincent Club and a widely travelled and highly cultivated young woman. She has spent the greater part of her life abroad, but is very popular with the smart younger set at home. Her mother was an Austen, and her grandmother a sister of the late Quincy Shaw.

Mr. Morison is a Harvard '08 man, tall, athletic in build and very popular. He is a grandson of the late Mrs. Samuel Eliot (Emily Marshall), daughter of a noted beauty of two generations ago. The Morisons spent last Winter and Spring in Paris, where their son was pursuing his studies. On their return to [illegible] last Fall they went to their country place, Brook House, at Peterboro, N. H. Miss Greene and her sisters spent last Summer at Bar Harbor.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Starkweather Miller have issued cards for the marriage of their daughter, Miss Ruth Miller, and Harold Barclay McFarland, [illegible] on May 14, at 4 o'clock, at the residence of Norfolk road, Chestnut Hill.

The young people will be at home to their friends after July 15 at 114 Township Line, Jenkintown, Pa.

Another notably brilliant matrimonial event will be the marriage, May 25, of Miss Beatrice Ayer and Lieutenant Patton, U. S. A. The ceremony will take place at the beautiful country home of the Ayers, "Avalon," at Pride's Crossing, and, should the weather permit, will be largely al fresco.

Miss Ayer is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Ayer of Commonwealth avenue, and was one of the leading debutantes when she made her initial bow in smart society about four years ago.

Lieutenant Patton is of the Fifteenth United States Cavalry, now stationed at Sheridan, Ill., and it is to that post he will take his bride at the conclusion of their honeymoon.

BARBARA SHEAFE ALSO SOON TO WED.

Wednesday, June 1, is the date set for the wedding of Miss Barbara Sheafe, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Sheafe of Hammond street, Chestnut Hill, and Allan McKissock. The ceremony will take place at noon at the rectory of St. Lawrence Church in Brookline and will be attended by only the relatives of the two families. A reception and breakfast will follow at the home of the Sheafes and will be largely attended.

Mr. McKissock, who is a son of William McKissock, is a member of the firm of Paterson, Wylde & Windeler, and also resides at Chestnut Hill.

Among the June weddings of special interest will be that in New York of Charlotte Grinnell and Alexander Forbes of Milton. Miss Grinnell is a daughter of Mrs. Morgan Grinnell (Sarah Stone) of East Fiftieth street, New York. Mr. Forbes is a son of Mrs. William Hathaway Forbes of Milton and a graduate of Harvard in the class of '04. Last January his brother, Waldo Forbes, married his cousin, Miss Ellen Forbes, daughter of Mrs. J. Malcolm Forbes. The marriage is to take place at the Grinnell mansion in New York on June 4.

The marriage of Robert De Ford, formerly of Cambridge, to Miss Mary Dorothea Hoffman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. Curson Hoffman of Baltimore, will take place on June 11 in Trinity Protestant Episcopal Church in Baltimore County, near the Hoffman country place. The young couple will sail immediately for Europe to spend a prolonged honeymoon. During their absence they will visit Mr. De Ford's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Wilkins as Ventnor, Isle of Wight.

UNCONVENTIONAL PHOTOGRAPH OF MISS ESTHER PICKERING

MISS ESTHER PICKERING

ONE of the cleverest, of the many notably clever Vincent Club dancers is pretty Esther Pickering, who trips the light fantastic like a veritable fairy. Miss Pickering was one of the dancers in the picturesque "Dice Shakers' Dance" given at the last show of the Vincent Club and, as usual, covered herself with glory. The dance was supposed to take place at Monte Carlo, and all the spirit of the place was infused into it by the dancers, who, besides Miss Pickering, were Miss Molly Hall, Miss Helen Grozier and Miss Margaret Bradley. Miss Pickering has long studied artistic dancing, and is certainly showing more and more each year the result of her untiring practice.

MANY BOSTONIANS TO SPEND THE SUMMER SEASON ON FOREIGN SOIL

[illegible] Mrs. Frank W. Wells an heritable liberality in the world of society, for wherever the leisure set is to be found at this particular season, Wanderlust is the ruling passion and those who are not already on the wing are looking forward with keenest anticipation to their departure and making final arrangements. A trip abroad is of course the necessary outcome of the passion for travelling that seizes upon families with the advent of May and the lists of passage taken together with the lists of recent departures are appalling when viewed from the standpoint of those who have decided to remain at home. The depletion that faces society in consequence of these departures is equally sufficient, in the minds of many of our maids and matrons, to make them content their well made plans and at the last moment decide to be abroad when the next round calls another and thus is doubtless accountable for many "reversals of family decisions" these days.

Mr and Mrs Francis W Chandler of Marlboro street and their daughters, the Misses Helen and Ethel Chandler, are spending the Spring in foreign travel, and have recently been in Egypt. When they go to Italy they will spend their time in Venice and some of the other important Italian cities. They are expected in America in June and will go to their country place in North Haven for the Summer. Their son Harry Leland Chandler, who is studying abroad, will not return with them.

Mrs. Franklin Q. Brown of Dobbs Ferry, New York, who was Miss Ida Elridge of Beacon street before her marriage, is about arriving in England as she was a passenger on the Cincinnati, which left New York recently. Mrs. Brown is a daughter of Mrs. Frederick Prudon, who was also an Eldredge, and will visit her at her home in Geneva. Before Mrs. Prudon and her step-daughter joined for the other side this Spring, they visited Mrs. Brown at her home in Dobbs Ferry.

IN SPRING FÊTES

Boston Society, in True Bohemian Style, Greets Opening of the "Pops."

THERE is no lack of any opportunity going on in town these days that society grasps eagerly at the slightest possibility in the way of amusement and anything that will prove reasonable excuse for donning their pretty Spring frocks and entertaining. Monday night the opening of the "Pops" saw all of them out in their gayest and all who had entertained at dinner early in the evening brought their guests with them to the concert, so there was a jolly gathering of the clans and they proceeded to enjoy themselves in true Bohemian style.

Among those entertained at dinner and brought for good cheer on to the concert were Mrs. Lloyd S. Draper, wife of the Governor, and several guests at a table well in the foreground. Mrs. Draper wore a handsome gown of black spotted lace over white satin and a large black hat trimmed with plumes.

Her winsome debutante daughter, Dorothy's becoming gown of red rose satin made an interesting note of color among the more subdued and restrained surrounding her. Another member of the Draper party was the pretty little blonde "Pop," Margaret Richardson, who wore a clinging gown of pale blue satin and a large white hat plumed with pink roses.

The two handsomest women in town, the Misses Grenell, Mrs. John C. Linehan, and the striking, petite and decidedly blonde young Mrs. Alfred Coolidge, were the recipients of numerous admiring glances as they entered and made their way to their table, which was served by Mr Coolidge and that handsome young bachelor, Percy Hughton. Mrs. Coolidge's handsome gown was accentuated by her clinging gown of black satin and black lace and her big hat of black which was of extremely wide brim and came well down over her face was trimmed with a wreath of pink rosebuds.

Plumed Black Hat.

Mrs. Codman wore a handsome creation of dark mauve cloth and large black hat trimmed with black plumes.

Another strikingly handsome young matron was Mrs Gordon Abbott, who was distinguished in black lace and a large black hat trimmed with pink roses. She had as her guest Mrs. George Lewis, who wore a gown of white lace over black satin and a large black hat trimmed with white plumes.

Another interesting party was that entertained by that graceful and picturesque matron, Mrs. Francis Shaw. Mrs. Shaw was in a most becoming creation of tan chiffon, with which she wore a large white hat. Among her guests was Mrs. Joseph Ray, Jr., who wore gray chiffon and self-toned lace and a large black hat trimmed with gray plumes.

Mrs. Stephen Bennett, who arrived late and made a decided stir as she entered, was looking exceptionally well in pale gray satin veiled in embroidered gray chiffon and a small black turban trimmed with white paradise plumes. Among her guests was pretty Miss Thomas Hopkinson in a charming frock of apricot satin and a large black plumed hat.

Miss Eleanor Allen, who was among the earliest arrivals and walled in the entrance way for some time before she was joined by the other members of her party, was distinguished in black satin and a black turban trimmed with black plumes.

Interesting Group.

Mrs. John S. Bush and her daughters, Theodora Bush, made an interesting group at one of the forward tables. Mrs. Bush was in palest gray satin with taupe lavender trimmed with flowers of a deeper shade. Miss Theoda wore one blue satin and a large black hat, while Miss Bush was in deep mauve.

Mrs. Harris Livermore, whose oriental type of beauty is always much admired, was among those who entertained. She had as her guests that picturesque young matron, Mrs. William Nickerson, whose marriage took place a couple of years ago in England. Mrs. Livermore was handsomer than ever in pale blue satin and a large black hat the brim of which was lined with pale blue satin matching her gown, and trimmed with large black plumes.

Mrs. Nickerson was in a chic walking suit of black and white check, and wore a black turban trimmed with white aigrettes.

Mrs William O. Hay, in a gown of taupe cloth and large black hat trimmed with pink roses, entertained Mrs. William Amee, who was charming in black chiffon over blue satin and a large white hat trimmed with pink roses.

Mrs Frank O. Macomber, in black satin and a large black hat, entertained Mrs Warren I. Lee and several other guests at her well-appointed table. Mrs. Lee was in dark blue satin.

Mrs. Timothee Adamowski, in black satin and a large pouse-laden hat, and Mrs. L. H. Mudgett, in blue satin, were other notably handsome women there.

Miss Emily Beebe, in tan chiffon and a tan hat trimmed with pink roses, was the guest of Miss Annie Warren, who wore lime satin and a black hat.

Mrs. James Lowell Putnam, in black chiffon and lace and a large black hat edged with white and trimmed with black plumes, came late and joined the Stephen Sargents at their table.

Bostonians in Gayeties At Fortress Monroe.

LIFE at an army post is never monotonous, and guests who go to the Hotel Chamberlain, Fortress Monroe, Va., whether in the middle of the Winter or in the Summer, come in for their share of the gaiety and are frequently entertained at luncheons, dances and card parties which are given by the wives of the officers of the garrison. Many of these informal affairs have been given during the past week.

Booth Tarkington, the novelist, and his wife are mid sojourning at the Chamberlain and have been the guests of honor at many dinner parties, one of them being given Sunday night by Captain and Mrs. Clarence McNeil at the Chamberlain. Others present were Captain and Mrs. Francis H. Lincoln, Captain and Mrs. Curtis Hornbeck and Lieutenant and Mrs. Walter C. Baker.

A party of Boston people who arrived the earliest in Rockport Wednesday afternoon was composed of Mr and Mrs. Robert Bowling, Miss Dorothy Green, Mr and Mrs. Frederick Grant, James Cooper and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hollingshead.

A party of sixty-two tourists, in charge of Howard W. Poor of Boston, arrived Sunday at the Chamberlain and took luncheon, after which they were shown all over the fortress. Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Millhan and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Otis Proctor of Rochester are spending some time at the hotel.

Mrs. J. Franklin Hall, wife of General Hall, who was recently retired as chief of the staff of the army, was the guest of honor at an informal bridge party, given by Mrs. Thomas Hodgson, whose husband is Colonel Knox, governor of the Old Soldiers' Home in Hampton.

The largest party that ever came to the Chamberlain included 150 guests who came down on the special train belonging to George W. Stevens, president of the A. & O. railroad. They arrived Saturday noon for luncheon. The palm garden had been transformed into a Summer garden, hundreds of roses, carnations and branches of lilacs being used. Gray-haired business men forgot their worries, and like boys enjoyed an old time picnic. After luncheon an impromptu wedding march was participated in, the temporary groom being "Billy" Langhorn, and the blushing bride, who proudly admitted she had passed her eighty-second birthday, was Miss Betty Clark of Richmond, who is one of the most famous characters of that city. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. William Pape Royal, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bowling, Judge Samuel Wiley, Mr. and Mrs. Brock Watkins, Mrs. Burn, Miss Hilliard Anderson, Miss Stone Stevens, Rhoades Hill, son Ashton Clark, Miss Hattie Rose and Miss Betty Clark.

Four people from Rochester enjoyed a sail about Hampton Roads on Tuesday. They were Mr and Mrs. David Hastings and Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Long.

Boston visitors at the Hotel Chamberlain during the week were Mr. and Mrs. Lorin C. Monroe, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick C. Wiant, Mr. George W. Perkins, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Mee, Miss Ella L. Dow, Miss Ethel B. Mee, Mrs. Quincy A. Shaw, Miss Rose Jordan, Mrs. Henry Parkman and Mrs. George H. Lee, Dr. Frederick Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. Geradeu, Howard W. Poor, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Rotch, Mr. M. Gaines, Miss Eva Gaines and Mrs. R. L. Swift, F. E. Cleveland, Mrs. John Chipman Gray.

Big Attendance at Association Meeting.

A GOODLY attendance of seventy or eighty women marked the meeting of the Ladies' Aid Association of the Soldiers' Home in Massachusetts held at Sewall Hall, Huntington avenue, Thursday afternoon.

At the meeting it was voted to purchase books for the library at the home. Reports were given of visits and entertainments, also of contributions of cake and flowers at the home the past month. Two new members were also added, Mrs. E. Copeland of Whitman and Mrs. Eleanor E. Brown of Natick, the latter a daughter of the Warsaw Rebel Cook.

Visitors at the Home for May 8 were Mrs. Lizzie Bullen of East Weymouth and Mrs. Hattie J. Bradley of Mrs. William Dow of Bridgewater, Mrs. Sullivan of the Soldiers' Home in Chelsea, Mrs. Major of the State Board of Women Managers of the Soldiers' Home in Chelsea, Mrs. Hon. Bogue, also expressed it, "to have some good seed."

The next regular meeting will be held June 2 at the Home in Chelsea, when ice cream and cake will be served to the men. Memorial Day will be observed at Forest Dale Cemetery, Malden.

Mrs. Stephen S. Fitzgerald of Boylston street has been at the Arlington Hotel in Washington during the week.

Suffrage Is Social Feature These Days

WITH any number of lectures and receptions given "with a purpose," and a variety of semi-monthly teas and diverting discussions and with a topic of popular dramatic residues on the subject, and with all kinds of enticing and alluring games, equal suffrage these days is "going" more enthusiastically than its most ardent champion could have dreamed of a year or two ago. And now on Tuesday, the seventeenth of the month, comes the most striking society affair in the suffrage yearly calendar, for that is the date chosen for the May Festival this year. It is planned on a big small scale, as it were, and is calculated to attract the fashionable host before the last remnant departs for the Summer home in June. There will be quite a number of speakers, among the principal ones of which will be Mrs. Frances Squire Potter of New York and Miss Rae Costelloe of London, England. Mrs. Alice W. Bennett, formerly of Boston, and now of New York, has been invited to preside at the dinner and introduce the speakers. Among the Boston women who are especially interested in the affair are the following whose names appear on the list of patronesses:

Mrs. Oliver Ames, Mrs. Amelia Hollingsworth, Mrs. Charles G. Ames, Mrs. Frederick Amory, Mrs. E. W. Batchelder, Mrs. Robert Bacon, Mrs. Ida Bell, Mrs. B. S. Bowerdon, Miss Alice Stone Blackwell, Miss Amanda M. Loomis, Mrs. George H. Page, Mrs. Edwin D. Mead, Mrs. Barrett Schlesinger, Mrs. Louis M. Peabody, Mrs. John Crowley, Mrs. Geo. F. Richardson, Mrs. Jos. Dennett, Miss H. M. Laughton, Miss Catherine D. Bates, Miss Alice Longfellow, Miss Nancy M. Dennett, Mrs. A. M. Nevers, Mrs. Gerald Stanley Lee.

HEIR TO THRONE OF MONACO REFUSES TO ACCEPT CROWN

NEPHEW IS NEXT IN LINE

Cincinnati Woman Causes Social Sensation in Paris With Afternoon Musicale.

By MARQUIS De CASTELLANE.
Special Cable to Boston American.

PARIS, May 7.—Prince Albert of Monaco's only son and heir refuses to succeed to the throne of the Gambling Principality.

It seems that the suicides, broken hearts ruined homes and countless unknown tragedies caused by the gambling at Monte Carlo have sickened and disgusted him. He says he will have none of it. Prince Louis of Monaco is the son of Prince Albert by his first wife, who was a daughter of the Duke of Hamilton. He is forty years of age and inherits the strictly moral principles of his English mother.

Prince Albert and the Duchess of Hamilton had their marriage annulled, after which the Prince married the Duchess de Richelieu, formerly Miss Heine of New Orleans, from whom he has also been divorced.

Should Prince Louis persist in renouncing his rights to the throne of Monaco the next heir will be the Duke of Urack, son of Duke William of Wurtemburg and Princess Florentine of Monaco. He is a nephew of Prince Albert and is forty six years old. His wife is Princess Amelie of Bavaria.

I have just attended a most brilliant musicale, given by Mrs. Archibald G. White at her house on Avenue Kleber. Mrs. White is a very beautiful woman and sings delightfully. Her husband, an American millionaire, is president of the Cincinnati Gas Company and a business associate of the Tafts. The programme was excellent, and included songs of Grieg, Brahms, MacDowell and of Beckberg himself.

Among other notable society people I had the pleasure of meeting at this musicale were the Duchess D'Uzes, Miss Madeline Lemaire, and her exquisite daughter, the Servian Minister to France and Mme. De Max. Mrs. White's singing aroused great enthusiasm, which was altogether deserved.

A rumor reaches me that Mr. and Mrs. George W. Vanderbilt have become converts to the simple life as demonstrated by Dr. Wagner. I am told these distinguished American millionaires actually live up to the "life" in its strictest conformity.

At present they are in Berlin, living in a little suite of rooms once occupied by a poor Canadian writer. In each three rooms they have to pass through their landlady's kitchen, but they don't seem to see the pots and pans or the landlady, either. They are quite above material surroundings and have cut out all entertaining. Their one recreation is music.

FINEST CLUBHOUSE.

Royal Automobile Home in Pall Mall Soon Opens.

LONDON, May 7.—In a few months the future home of the Royal Automobile Club in Pall Mall, the most magnificent clubhouse in the world, will be opened. It has cost considerably above $1,000,000.

Forty feet below the street is a swimming tank, ninety feet by thirty feet. Though so low down, the light arrangements will be such that very little artificial illumination, if any, will be needed in the daytime.

A little above the street level is situated the dining room, at the end of which is provided what is considered to be the finest feature of the new club, and one unequalled in London—a terrace for dining in the open in the Summer.

A smoking room corresponds in length with the dining room, ninety-eight feet by forty feet.

CAPTURE HORSE SHOW.

Americans Grab Event Formerly an English Classic.

LONDON, May 7.—Americans dominate London completely this year and they are not going to leave after the Roosevelt receptions, but are evidently here to stay as long as the season lasts.

Even the London horse show, which used to be a purely national affair, is nearly all American and the number of horse owners from the other side the Atlantic who will exhibit their animals breaks all records.

A string of sixty fine horses belonging to Judge Moore of New York are to arrive here a week from Monday and a few days later E. M. Wetherby's team of American bred hunters will arrive, together with horses belonging to nearly a score of prominent breeders and horse owners in the United States. Alfred Vanderbilt's horses are already in England.

Shaw Apologizes to Universe for Making His Home in Britain

Great Irish Playright Scores the Nation's Indifference to Present Social Conditions.

LONDON, May 7.—This country is in a deplorable and appalling condition, and I publicly apologize to the universe for living in it.

George Bernard Shaw, the playwright, thus delivered himself while presiding at a meeting held for the purpose of considering the condition of labor and the causes of destitution in Great Britain.

Shaw's utterances had reference to the nation's indifference to the social condition of the workers. He advocated larger national expenditures to insure work for everybody.

"A great deal," he said, "of what has been called religion in this country for the last 500 years has been nothing less than a despicable effort to persuade the rest of the people that virtue is a cheap thing. Now let me tell you there are no good things that are cheap. If you want a decent, virtuous population, which you haven't got at present, you will have to pay for it, but you will find in the end that it will not cost as much as a vicious one."

Shaw's prescription for curing or relieving social suffering and degradation is to spend money, thus keeping the people efficient, healthy, well fed, and clothed instead of paying policemen and prison officials he would keep all men at work with the money.

CANAL CUTS EUROPE.

Vessels Soon to Go Inland from Sea to Sea.

GENEVA, May 7.—A waterway through the heart of Europe, joining the North Sea to the Mediterranean and passing through Holland, Germany, Switzerland and France will be an accomplished fact within the next seven years.

The Paris municipality has given the first impetus to the International scheme by deciding to open navigation on the Rhone between Geneva and Marseilles and has decided to construct a barrage and a parallel canal to the Rhone from Genissiat, an hour's journey by train from Geneva. The work will be commenced this year.

The Swiss Association for Navigation on the Rhine has likewise declared itself to prolong the river route from Geneva to Basle via the lakes of Neuchatel, Morat and Bienne and the River Aar, which flows into the Rhine at North Soleure. It is proposed to build Basle on the Rhine highway.

LADIES SPECULATE.

Titled Fair Ones Make Goodly Sums in Rubber Boom.

LONDON, May 7.—Many titled women made money in the rubber boom. Lady Dorothy Neville cleared her whole fortune, closed for some time, cleared $750,000 and is now having the place repaired and decorated.

Lady Constance Richardson is also reported to have made a nice sum. It will add her if she really desires to start a "book" school. There is strong likelihood, however, of her going on another American tour and adding the most recent recipe of dances. Her sister, the Countess of Cromartie, as well as her husband, is greatly disgusted at her appearance in public.

DUCHESS LECTURES.

Her Grace of Marlborough to Lend Aid to College.

LONDON, May 7.—The Duchess of Marlborough is becoming quite a speaker. She will hold a drawing room at Sunderland House on June 29 in aid of the building fund of Bedford College for Women and deliver an address.

Owing to the death of the Countess Tréfener, sister of Mrs. John W. Mackay, the latter's magnificent house in Carlton House terrace will be closed for nine months. It was to have been the scene of many brilliant functions during the season. Mrs. Mackay was to divide her time between Italy, France and America.

MORGAN DISAPPOINTED.

Famous Financier Anxious to Get Gardner Collection.

LONDON, May 7.—It is said that J. P. Morgan is extremely disappointed over his inability to acquire the famous Gardiner collection of 70,000 prints and drawings, showing London in every phase of its existence.

He now has longing eyes on two other art collections which are shortly to come into the market.

The Gardner collection, which is literally worth its weight in gold, was purchased by Major Edward Coates, M. P., who is building a special gallery for it, built out of rubber, in which commodity the Major recently made his fortune.

SINGING RECORD.

Aged 72; He Warbles 100 Songs an Evening.

LONDON, May 7.—What is believed to be the most prolonged singing performance on record has just been achieved by Mr. Alexander R. Porter, a magistrate living in the Liverpool suburb of Waterloo, who before retiring from business was chief accountant in Liverpool of the North and South Wales Bank.

Mr. Porter has sung a hundred songs in one evening by way of demonstrating his vigor at the age of seventy-two.

The veteran magistrate is sprightly in his bearing, and has a ruddy and cheerful face. He believes that vigorous and frequent singing tends to longevity and good health, and attributes his own mental and physical well-being to vocal exercise.

FORGIVEN, HE PAYS ALL BILLS RUN WHILE DISINHERITED

WEDDED SPANISH DANCER

Special Cable to Boston American.

LONDON, May 7.—Thomas Ross Winans, son and heir of the Baltimore millionaire and nephew of Walter Winans, the well known [illegible] and horseman [illegible] Paris, Prince de Sagan [illegible] makers, hotel managers and money lenders by sending over money to pay them all in full with interest.

Young Winans is supposed to be living in Washington since his father forgave him for marrying a Spanish dancing girl and killed the fatted calf. The varied bills he has just paid in picturesque fashion were contracted while he was disinherited for flauntingly standing by his Spanish wife. The money was paid to the astonished and delighted creditors by Mrs. J. A. Lewis, whose husband was a friend of young Winans in the days of his distress.

Woman Paid the Debts.

Mrs. Lewis turned the money into gold, put it in a gladstone bag and, accompanied by two porters, went the "paying off" rounds. They began at Williams's bar in the Rue de Rivoli, which is owned by Fred, the famous clown of the Nouveau Cirque. A later across the street got $18, and France and what was left went to a money lender of the Rue Mont Thabor.

Young Winans is living in Paris as the Maharajah of Kapurthala, who is now here with the Maharanee, who is the beautiful sister of Young Mrs. Winans. The Maharajah visited Colonel Roosevelt at the United States Embassy and invited him to go to India and shoot over his domain of 300,000 acres. Mr. Roosevelt was unable to accept owing to engagements already made for next year in the United States.

NEW CHILD MODES.

Paris Is Offering Diversions from the Ruling Styles.

PARIS, May 7.—With the arrival of Spring charming models for children are seen in the store.

One for a child of eight is an old fashioned small-checked gingham frock of tomato color, trimmed with bands and ruffles of that most solid and pretty English embroidery. Touches of black velvet appear on the opening of the yoke and in the belt. The dress in question was made with the short skirt and carried the fashion of tiny ruffles, which has the effect of making the little wearer resemble a huge and beautiful doner.

The big department stores are showing a quantity of desirable frocks for little [illegible] The prettiest one I have seen is a very narrow striped, changeable silk, such as was in fashion some twenty years ago.

The models are most attractive. Many have panies edged with pinked-out ruffles.

DUKE VISITS U. S.

De Morny Married Daughter of Gusman Blanco.

PARIS, May 7. The Duc de Morny is destined in Europe by illness. He had expected to go this week to the United States where large business enterprises await him. The Duke has formed a partnership with Frank Lacroix Gardner, the American millionaire, who made his money in Australian mines.

The Duc de Morny is chiefly known for having married the beautiful daughter of Gusman Blanco, the predecessor of Castro in the dictatorship of Venezuela. The Duke and the Duchess are legally separated, and would have been divorced had they not been devout Catholics.

The Duke's brother, the Comte de Morny, has made many unsuccessful efforts to marry an American heiress. His father was that Duc de Morny who was responsible for the "coup d'etat" which made Napoleon III. Emperor of France.

ACTRESS A PRINCESS.

Stage Beauty to Become Allied with High Nobility.

PARIS, May 7.—The engagement of Liane de Pougy with Prince George Ghika allies the Parisian stage beauty with numerous noble families of Roumania, France and England, as well as with the wealthy Slocer families of the United States. Prince Ghika belongs to the well known Roumanian family of Ghika, one member of which is Minister Plenipotentiary for [illegible] to France, and another is chamberlain [illegible] of Albania. This is Prince Albert Ghika, the latter who married Miss Dowling of Kildare, Ireland. Prince Albert is now heading a revolutionary movement against the Turks in Albania.

DREXEL WEDDING [illegible] 9

By CHARLES P. NORCROSS.
Special Cable to Boston American.

LONDON, May 7.—An Anglo-American engagement of great interest is that of Miss Helen Beatrice Stevens, daughter of the late Barry Stevens of New York, to Arthur Post of New York, to Montagu Elliot, groom-in-waiting to the King. It was first announced early in 1910, then denied. Now it is re-announced, and the wedding will take place probably in July at the chapel Royal.

The reason why the engagement was not heretofore confirmed was the serious state of the health of Lady Barrymore, who is a daughter of the late General James Wadsworth of New York, but now her health, after a trip to South Africa, has greatly improved.

Mr. Elliot is a nephew of Lord St. Germans and is a distinguished and popular sportsman. Miss Post is very popular and a favorite of the Duke and Duchess of Connaught.

The engagement of Miss Post leaves the Princess Patricia of Connaught the last of that coterie of girls who four years ago were the belles of the season. The Crown Princess of Sweden, then Princess Margaret of Connaught, Mrs. John Ward and Lady Inverclyde were the others. They went to balls and other festivities together, one never accepting an invitation of the others were not invited, except in those cases where the Princesses were obliged to attend state affairs, and "Princess Pat," who has been Miss Nellie's boon companion, declares she will not wed till she can choose for herself.

Miss Post will not have a large dowry, and as Mr. Elliot has only a modest income there will be no attempt to keep up the extravagance of the Anglo-American set in London.

Drexel Wedding June 9.

The Maclstone-Drexel wedding will positively take place on June 9 at St. Margaret's Church, Westminster, where the bishop of London will officiate. The bridal robe is being made by Worth of Paris. The ten bridesmaids' dresses are being made in London.

Miss Mildred Carter, whose wedding will take place a fortnight later will be the matron of honor. Of the other bridesmaids will be Americans—Miss Edith Wayne of Philadelphia and Miss Nellie Post. The others are the Lady Gladys Finch Hatton, sister of Viscount Maidstone; Lady Letta Manners, Miss Rhoda Astley, daughter of Duchess Lady Hasl... Miss Margaret Combe, daughter of Lady Constance Combe; Miss Sybil Fellowes, daughter of Lady Ivor, and the two small daughters of Lady Muriel Paget. Miss Drexel will give the bridesmaids the latest thing in jewelry, called a "bundle of charms," which comprise the three latest mascots, a bell, a ball and a rabbit in gold studded with gems on a chain of gold encrusted with diamonds.

Mrs. W. Jef Astor's health for some time worried his wife and father. He has lost flesh, and it was feared his lungs were affected. He underwent the open air cure in Scotland in Arctic winter and returned wonderfully improved. He will spend the next winter in Switzerland.

Young Astor is a keen racing man and popular on the turf. His filly Whirlpool recently won the Thousand Guineas Stakes. He expects to entertain Colonel Roosevelt at Cliveden.

Mrs. Roosevelt Captured.

Another Riverside host of Mr. Roosevelt will be Lewis Harcourt, at Nuneham, on May 18, when the ex-President visits Oxford. Mrs. Harcourt, who is a niece of J. P. Morgan, will have a host of distinguished people at her house for the occasion.

Mrs. Roosevelt, by the way, is being [illegible] with invitations to open various functions, and she has definitely promised to open the Exhibition of Fair Women at the Grafton picture gallers. Cecil Grace, whose daring aeroplane flights over the warships at Sheerness were universally praised, is a naturalized Englishman. He is a son of the late John Grace, an American cotton and Irish peer-to-be, and is a brother of Lady Greville. The machine used was a Wright model.

Under his brother Denis Cecil is not a mechanic. Their uncle, Michael Grace, who owns a fine house in Belgrave square and is the tenant of [illegible] Abbey, one of the most interesting [illegible] houses in England, is now in full [illegible] William Grace, once Mayor of New York. One of Michael Grace's daughters is Mrs. Jay Phipps, who divides the year between Long Island and England.

Special Correspondence Boston Sunday American.

DUBLIN, April 30.—By common consent, even among his political enemies, he has no other kind, John Redmond is today the biggest man in Ireland. He is at the head of the most loyal and united body of representatives Ireland has ever sent to fight her battles in the Parliament of England, and their position to-day is the strongest Irishmen have held in Westminster since the passage, by perjury and fraud, of the act of union.

By force of his brilliant leadership Redmond, "Premier of Ireland to be," has compelled the great issue of the people against the Lords to become the supreme test of British politics. In doing this he has [illegible] and carry out Parnell's plans and policy. With the enormous vision which raised him to the front rank of statesmanship and made the state councils of Europe watch his every move, Mr. Parnell always held to the guiding principle that, after Irish Independence, the House of Lords was the one great obstacle to the winning of home rule for Ireland.

The time has at last come for the abolition of the unlimited veto of the Lords, and Redmond is forcing the fight along the very lines Parnell would have followed had he not been summoned to the silence of the tomb.

The Wave of Radicalism.

Twenty, ten, even five years ago, this issue would never have been raised. Now it is ripe, vital, immediate. The great mass of the British people did some slow thinking for many years on this question of the Lords. It is only within a year that they tongues of fire began to leap through the heather. The Billulists, masters of privilege took no notice of the curling smoke and went calmly and contemptuously upon their imperious way. Each day the smoke and the flames grew thicker and stronger. Then came a wave of radical reform, the highest and strongest the great British race has known in all her history since Cromwell. At last the British and Irish democracies, held apart all these years by the masters of privilege on both sides of the Irish Sea, are united against the hereditary House of Lords.

When Redmond found himself, as the result of the recent elections, holding in his hands the balance of power in the House of Commons, he made up his mind to take up his pledge and get to work upon the red hot iron of his opportunity.

As the sparks flew it and right from Redmond's anvil, Premier Asquith began to grow timid. He pranked with the Irish leader that perhaps it would be wiser not to strike so fast; that gentle and more deliberate blows could do as effective work. But the head of the Irish party knew too much to stop or let up for an instant, and his hammering went on with energy.

Right soon Mr. Asquith saw the effect of the Redmond [illegible]. He saw things were shaping at Westminster just as the Irish leader said they would, and he began to [illegible] his course. [illegible] British Liberals and Irish Nationalists are now united [illegible] the stubborn House of Peers.

When Lord [illegible] He quit [illegible] acceptance of the [illegible] George budget, he knew he was [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

LOS ANGELES CALLS BROOKLINE TEACHER

Be successful in her chosen line of work is one Brookline girl that overtures are being made for her services by California, while the people of her home town are striving just as energetically to retain her.

She is Miss Mary V. McGrath, the only woman instructor in the Brookline Municipal technical school since the building opened two years ago.

So far as school authorities of Los Angeles could see no overlord of her ability that they would offered her a salary of $1,000 a year. Since then the women of the best known families are planning to have Miss McGrath retained in Brookline at any cost.

The young instructor's ability in sugar candy making, a specialty which has won for the pupils of Miss McGrath premiums from the Brookline Agricultural fair, and a reputation which has brought Miss McGrath many requests for recipes, is the cause of the present commotion.

"I am undecided what to do," said Miss Brookline of accepting the offer," said Miss McGrath in the New York evening. "I have to leave for home and friends and friends and I have to make up my mind to do one thing or the other right away."

The latest number of the [illegible] prepared for the [illegible] Department of Agriculture by [illegible] Wilson after careful tests at the [illegible] to the Boston American today.

Like the previous [illegible] the government publication [illegible] to best use parts that [illegible] tables that ordinarily [illegible].

The recipes are for [illegible] and for rice and corn [illegible]. Methods of cooking peas, [illegible] beans, and its cousin, the [illegible] artichokes—in fact, everything [illegible] knowledge of the ordinary [illegible].

WHAT THE COOK BOOK SAYS.

As a foreword the cook book says: "The simpler the method of cooking vegetables the better. A [illegible] serving vegetables the better. A [illegible] grown and well-cooked vegetable is palatable and readily digestible. [illegible] cooked, water-soaked vegetables very easily cause digestive disturbances often serious. Nearly every vegetable may be cooked so that with proper [illegible] it may form a palatable [illegible] if it is desired to serve it in this [illegible].

"All green vegetables [illegible] should be crisp and firm when [illegible] if for any reason a [illegible] its firmness and [illegible] soaked in very cold water [illegible] plump and crisp. With [illegible] this will be only a [illegible] of old roots and tubers often [illegible].

"All vegetables should be [illegible] cooked just before [illegible]. Vegetables that form [illegible] can be cauliflower and [illegible] also [illegible] cooked, begin [illegible] salt and water, to which [illegible] fats and vinegar may be [illegible] are any worms or other [illegible] life in those vegetables [illegible] way.

"To secure the best [illegible] vegetables except the [illegible] be put in boiling water [illegible] be made to boil again [illegible] after the water has [illegible] must be kept boiling [illegible] finished. If young vegetables [illegible] as [illegible] and cauliflower, etc., the cooking [illegible] not be so rapid as for broiling [illegible] from the fire when the pod must also be cooked gently [illegible] kept simmer. When [illegible] pod and a few seed they are to be cooked rapidly, like the herbaceous vegetables. Salt and butter are the best seasoning."

Greens Aid Digestion.

Spring greens, most in demand at the season of the year, make up the opening part of the cook book. Greens are rich in nourishing foods but they help the digestion and often have a tonic effect. When served with oils and vinegar they help the other food to be digested easily. Greens when properly prepared, they are extremely cheap.

"Green peas are the most spoiled and [illegible] of the [illegible] vegetables. They are [illegible] to [illegible] except [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

COLLEGE GIRLS, TAKE UP FARMING, IS THE ADVICE OF LAURA D. GILL

Agriculture Strongly Recommended as an Ideal Vocation for the Graduates.

By LAURA DRAKE GILL

Former Dean of Barnard College; President of the Association of Collegiate Alumnae; Chairman of the Education Committee of the General Federation of Women's Clubs; President of the Department of School Patrons of the National Education Association; trustee of Smith College, and head of the Vocational Board of the Women's Educational and Industrial Union.

(Written Especially for the Sunday American.)

THERE are about 3,000 women who will graduate from the colleges and universities of the United States this year. Mount Holyoke, Radcliffe, Wellesley, Smith and Vassar will graduate more than 1,000 of these. The question is, what should be rendering services commensurate with the education which they have had the chance to get?

REPORT INCREASING DEMAND FOR LAND

New Investors and Home-Seekers Reach Record Number at This Season.

SALES of house lots and acreage property in the various suburbs are now under full swing and all the operators in and developers of this class of real estate report big business. These land sales are apparently more popular than ever this Spring and the number of such new investors and prospective home-buyers and builders reaches a record figure.

This good demand for such properties is not restricted to any particular suburb or to any one general direction from the city, but is widespread and all the land companies and operators are receiving a share of the returns. Quite a few of the brokers who find their best medium of reaching the investing public through the columns of the American report excellent success with their properties and their confidence this is largely due to their advertising carried through the American.

Among some of the sales reported the past week are the following:

THIS MAN MUST FAIL—BY HERBERT KAUFMAN

He is too vain to be sane. His viewpoint is not the true point from which he must be estimated. His vision is defective—so blinded with egotism that he cannot see his faults as others see them.

The more he believes in himself the more he deceives himself. He listens only to flattery. He doubts what does not please him. He mistakes the candied truth for the candid truth.

He is too narrow to be fair; too pompous to be important; too bigoted to be intelligent.

His conceit is a challenge—an insult and a taunt to society at large. He cannot presume that he is superior unless he assumes that we are inferior. He makes an enemy wherever he makes an impression.

He sets himself on the scales of vanity and insists that the world shall accept his exaggerated weight. His bearing precludes sincerity. His pose prohibits correction—he has no real friends because he will not permit frank criticism and without frankness friendship is useless.

His love is a personal monopoly, so intense and steadfast that he cannot consistently marry without suing his bride for alienation of affection.

He exacts such a nauseating amount of admiration that we cannot maintain both self respect and his acquaintanceship.

He is a cheap magnet whose power attracts snides and snobs and sycophants. His intimates are usually spongers and adventurers—rogues who fleece while they praise him—shabby gentility buying a bite and a sup with the counterfeit coin of adulation.

His employes are generally inferior—unable to better themselves and secretly despising him for demanding a smirk with their work.

At his best he is a pest.

His weakness so exceeds his strength—his selfishness is so patent, that we dislike and distrust him. We doubt his honesty; we know that he is incapable of disinterested motives. Self-complacency can always find a sophistry with which to justify a trick or a meanness. He can never realize that he is wrong; therefore, he does not believe that he can do a wrong.

His nature is a handicap—a barrier which keeps him out of the important highways. He is a leader with but one loyal follower, and without the confidence of the many success is practically hopeless.

After a while, Providence grows irritable, stops coddling him, angrily jams him against the wall, and calls upon all the knowledge and skill and resource and force and supporters that he can summon to his aid.

Only then does he understand where he stands. Bad luck is his good luck. Misfortune is his best fortune. Adversity is a kindly whip. It first lashes him, then scatters his quondam associates, and proves that they were merely willing to share his "blow-outs," not his blows.

It takes the thump of defeat to reduce his bump of conceit.

BIG BARGAINS THIS WEEK THE BEST PIANOS

New and Second Hand

Don't get the impression that only second-hand Pianos can be had at these sales—As a matter of fact we sometimes sell the entire stock of new Pianos of some small Piano Trust dealer who, through force of circumstances, was obliged to "shut up shop," store his stock and finally let it go. We have in the course of a year hundreds of new Trust Pianos that in the "course of events" come up in the salesrooms to be sold and always at a sacrifice.

We would advise you to make up your mind to buy your Piano this coming week and as soon as circumstances will allow you. There are not enough Pianos in the lot to last through Saturday, and we do not take any from the accounts for sale until Mondays—People who get in and buy Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays get tremendous bargains.—Every Piano is tuned by our expert and is put in the best condition before coming into our salesroom.—We let no Piano go out before being assured of its excellent condition.

People familiar with New York, Chicago and Philadelphia makes of fine Pianos can appreciate the fine values of this week's sale when we say that the best Pianos of the following makers, new and slightly used, will go for a great deal less than the original cost of manufacture—BAILEY PIANO CO., PHILA.—CROWN CO., CHICAGO—ESTEY, NEW YORK—JACOB DOLL, NEW YORK—MILTON, NEW YORK—SINGER, CHICAGO—KRAKAUER BROS., NEW YORK—BRADBURY PIANO CO., NEW YORK, and many others—Don't forget these makes—you people who have traveled

QUICK, FIND THE CAT OR CALVIN TAFT IS HOMELESS

East Lyme Man, Beguiled a Three Feet by Woman's Wit, Is Badly Upset.

EAST LYME, May 7. A widespread search is being made in this section of the state for Spot, a three-year-old cat, who has mysteriously disappeared from the home of Calvin Taft.

Ordinarily a person who loses a cat or loses his home is to be pitied before in the history of the world a cat disappear under the same circumstances.

Calvin Taft, who is sixty-three years old, has simply got to get that cat back or lose his home. It is all in black and white in the legal will of the late Mrs. Jennie Fields.

The fact that two other cats, relatives of Spot, left by will under the same circumstances to the care of Mr. Taft, have died suddenly, has added to the mystery of the case and to the [illegible] Taft home

Reward, Dead or Alive.

"I don't know what I will do if I don't get Spot back," walled the old man when seen by a reporter. "I just naturally have to find that cat. The house is locally mine so long as the estate are and I am to be provided for, but here two of them up and d. suddenly, and I think that there's something mighty funny about that last one. I'll tell you what, if anybody has [illegible] or any of them, give me word that I have to leave this home I'm going [illegible]

FINANCIAL

Six Hundred Acres Are Being Worked in Ontario Following Rich Discovery.

Following the discovery of ruby gems in Ashby township adjoining the County of Renfrew, Ont., a syndicate of Boston and New York capitalists has been working on 600 acres of land and recently obtained 400 acres more. The stones found have turned out to be very high in value, the formation being practically identical with that which obtains in the ruby fields of Burmah, from which almost all the finest gems come. Several of the stones have been cut by a leading jeweler and were found to be extremely good in color, but at present the syndicate has erected on its property a large camp house for the workmen, a stable and a work shop, around the principal compound which is said to be quite a few acres in extent. Up to date $1,500,000 has been invested in the scheme, according to a report in the New York Herald Paris edition.

The discovery of the new field dates back to the time of last year when Mr J. H. Jewell of Toronto was entertaining a party of friends at his hunting lodge at Lake Clear. Two prospectors, who had been out looking for graphite, showed some stones of the ruby stones, and they were referred to Mr. Jewell with a view to their sale. Following this a stock company was formed, with a capital of $2,500,000, of which $1,500,000 has been subscribed by leading capitalists in New York and Boston.

NEWS OF THE UNION ORGANIZATIONS IN GREATER BOSTON

Traffic at Public Garden Subway Entrance Will Not Be Held Up Labor Day.

TRAFFIC at the Public Garden entrance of the subway will not be tied up by the Labor Day parade this year. The trade [illegible] Labor Council [illegible] streets instead of the mall as [illegible] same route as [illegible] have done away with it [illegible] to the traffic and public [illegible] phy, president of the Central Labor Union and secretary Barry, [illegible] big Trades Department, suggested the change. In former years, when the head of the parade was formed in Copley square, the holiday crowds [illegible] city on the electric via Boylston street [illegible] or Huntington [illegible] of 9 and 11 [illegible] to wait in [illegible] else were [illegible] on a row, [illegible] reach it, [illegible] thence out [illegible] that the [illegible] at Copley [illegible] route of the [illegible] to Charles, [illegible] through Charles to Park square, and then to [illegible] avenue, to prevent crossing the electric car tracks at all, on Boylston street.

In celebration of recent victory in the two months' strike at the Roxbury Carpet Mills, the girl [illegible] next Wednesday [illegible] Labor Temple [illegible].

Ten thousand men employed in the twelve building and mechanical trades of the Sea Horse Railroad are making a renewed demand for the re-adoption of a plan to prevent increase in wages recently offered the joint committee of Labor Unions and Trades Council, by the management of that road.

Machinists' Union, No. 264 holds another of its big agitation meetings at Faneuil Hall at 8 o'clock this afternoon, to prepare for the enforcement of their demand for higher wages.

Under a three-year agreement just entered into between the Electrical Contractors' Union and the employers, the pay of all journeymen is raised from $4 to $4.50 a day for the next twelve months, with a further provision for $4.50 a day after that.

Several renewals of the wage-scale agreement existing between Bakers' Union No. 7 and 31 master bakers of Boston are reported by The Sun Pebble, secretary of the union, who also declares that no labor troubles are anticipated among the bakers of Boston this year.

Calls are out for a special meeting of Marine Pipe Fitters' Union No. 195 at No. 18 Kneeland street Tuesday night to consider questions of great interest to the pipe fitters now employed at the navy yard.

The newly enacted law which goes into effect May 25 and which compels members of any strike existing when advertising for help, it is generally conceded, will be a big advantage to the trade unionists of this city, vouchsafing the strongest kind of work on June 1 if their demands for higher wages are not granted.

MARY MEYER.

John F. Fitzgerald's second year as Mayor (1907) was a very interesting year. It began with trouble and ended in disaster to the Democratic party. The Finance Commission was created by Fitzgerald himself and the Legislature conferred upon it extraordinary powers, and I believe if they had not got the powers the members of the commission would have refused to serve.

It was some time late in the legislative session that the Finance Commission bill was passed, so that it was unnecessary that they get down to business. The [illegible] of the politicians were taken from the Finance Commission for a while by the fight for delegates for the gubernatorial nomination. Bartlett ran the year previous (1906) and didn't, so far as could be learned, care for a second nomination. But some of his close friends, who were very close as advisors to a certain State street magnate, continued him that he was being side-tracked by the machine, so-called, for Whitney. Bartlett, however, decided to be a candidate.

SHARP BATTLE FOR THE NOMINATION.

The fight for delegates was a sharp one. Money was used liberally. The caucus showed a decided victory for Whitney, but that doesn't make any difference nowadays. Caucuses or conventions are not at all final nowadays. The idea of the present-day politician (and particularly that kind who are interested in protecting the rights of the people) is to fight and make trouble so long as possible and then sell out. The State committee decides upon the mode of conduct as well as the officers of the convention. In fact, the State committee decides everything.

However, this year the State committee was pretty evenly divided between the two candidates, yet Whitney had a slight majority. If it wasn't for the [illegible] two members of the committee, who if they had been present would have voted with the Whitney side. The result was that Dunn, J. Kiley was chosen chairman of the convention over McNary by two votes—Kiley 23, McNary 21, with Cronin of Ward 25 and Henry Fitzgerald, brother of the Mayor, and Joseph A. Donahue absent. The State committee also voted to [illegible] to the hall be by ticket and not by [illegible].

The convention was held October 5, 1905, in the Court Square Theatre, Springfield. The Whitney delegates were bound at the Massasoit House and the Bartlett delegates were at the Haynes House, at which house also were held the meetings of the State committee. The mail street in Springfield was alive with excitement all night.

A Terrible Night.

The night before (which at all conventions is a gala night) was a terrible night. I have it on the best of authority that one of the Charlestown delegates was taken out of his hotel tied in an elevator and sent down stairs. Empty bottles were used as bowling pins in the corridors.

At the Massasoit House were the headquarters of the Democratic city committee of Boston. Jack Gallagher, a very warm friend of Fitzgerald and Jack is a mighty good fellow, too), was sent by McClellan, president of the committee, to take charge of the committee's headquarters, which he did. Gallagher never had any experience in that line, and, to be frank, was floundering around. He supposed that there was a place already prepared for him over which he was to preside. He was walking around the corridors with his eyes and ears open for some up to put him right, but he got none. He noticed, however, Jimmy [illegible] Neil (who, by the way, has board upon which was printed in large letters quite active in arranging in a large room [illegible] impromptu bar with a goodly supply of wet goods of all kinds, and cigars, too). The next move that Jimmy made, right before Jack's eyes, was to tack up a cardboard up which was printed in large letters "All delegates to Democratic City Committee of Boston." But the final, and most genial, was when Jimmy said to Jack, "Dish out some of that beer to those fellows, will you, Jack?"

McClellan was not to blame for the mix-up, because he made any difference whom he appointed Jack Gallagher that Jimmy O'Neil had received a life [illegible] years ago for the delegates. It was a foregone conclusion that there was going to be some trouble. Members who arrived late didn't know that the credentials had to be changed for pink tickets. Then the delegates were told that they could be changed at the box office.

I remember well there is a park in front of the Court Square Theatre, and I stood in the park and watched the crowd and the line of delegates waiting to get their credentials exchanged for tickets. It didn't make much difference, anyway, because there wasn't any politician with strong and good deeds great enough to withstand the disgrace of that convention.

What was the use of contesting for a nomination from a convention such as that? I could see on the faces of the people as they passed through the park a look of profound regret.

Whitney Delegates Bolted.

It was all over. The Whitney delegates bolted and won before the Ballot Law Commission, but that went on the ballot upon nomination papers.

The county contests were very bitter that year. Jim Donovan was nominated for sheriff against Searey and [illegible] Dolan was defeated for registrar of probate and Joseph A. Donovan was defeated for district attorney.

The party was in a demoralized state. The Finance Commission was pounding away at Fitzgerald and the Springfield affair, in fact everything was upside down. The only man that who could help, order out of the conditions that existed at that time, but they could have been avoided.

The late John B. Moran, [illegible] Joseph A. Donohue, beating him by over thirty-two thousand votes. Moran in fact had both of his opponents Donovan and Webster about to [illegible] votes. Donovan was defeated by Searey by 1002 votes, Dolan by Kiley by 961 and Webster by 1,000 votes to spare. It was an awful slaughter.

Illness Overcomes Moran.

Not long after Moran's re-election he was taken ill, and it soon was admitted by his self and his friends that he was afflicted with tuberculosis. He made a brave fight to get back to his health so he could not be checked and he died far away in the Southwest, giving fate in irony, chance [illegible] proved [illegible] supplied Arthur Hill getting district attorney. He would have given Moran the race, but happened. All that happened since is to [illegible] to require a separate article to [illegible] at this time. Hill was nominated for mayor by the Democratic city committee in the [illegible] office, and Pelletier, the Democratic nominee in the mayoralty campaign as Valley [illegible] last November. After the 1909 State [illegible] was over the books were cleaned [illegible] the most momentous universally campaign [illegible] Boston ever knew. The fight was between Fitzgerald and Storrow, with Hibbard as [illegible] Taylor carrying small [illegible] Hibbard showed, although it will always be a mystery [illegible] with Hibbard out of the [illegible] fray Fitzgerald would not have won [illegible] Moran had lived the part he would have taken in the campaign might have changed history. I think it would. But it was [illegible] nobody can know the [illegible] would venture to predict. He seldom [illegible] what politics was expected him to do, [illegible] habitually upset the calculations. He [illegible] He was a very aggressive foe, [illegible] gerald ever had, and he was a very [illegible] natural kindness of heart.

THE END.

For more than thirty years Redmond has been a commanding figure in political life. He was educated [illegible] of the leading Jesuit Colleges of [illegible]. Refused to Come Here.

Years ago, one of the most influential men in New York [illegible] John Redmond of an income of $1 [illegible] a year, if he would come to America and engage in the practise of law. The love of Ireland was stronger than visions of success in America.

Recently, in the columns of the Dublin Leader, there is [illegible] article to Mr. Redmond and his [illegible]. It is [illegible] Mr. F. Cruise O'Brien, concluded his article with these words:

"Some day Mr. Redmond will be Prime Minister in Ireland. It will be the reward of a lifetime of service, of much sacrifice, of many disappointments, of many triumphs and of unwearying and unbounded loyalty to the motherland. Few men would have deserved such a reward. John Redmond will richly deserve it."

PAPERS BY CLERGYMEN.

Greater Boston to Be Represented at Eucharistic Congress.

MONTREAL, May 7.—The number of ecclesiastical visitors who are coming to this city for the Eucharistic Congress will be the largest ever brought together in [illegible] America. Archbishop [illegible] and bishops [illegible] Spain [illegible] and [illegible] Cardinal Vannutelli. The session will be presided over by Archbishop Bruchesi and Cardinal Gibbons of Baltimore and Cardinal Logue of Ireland.

The congress will be opened by a pontifical [illegible] St. Patrick's Church, which will be chanted by his excellency, Cardinal Vannutelli. The session will be presided over by Archbishop Bruchesi and Cardinal Gibbons of Baltimore and Cardinal Logue of Ireland.

The following priests have accepted invitations to read papers before the English speaking section of the congress: Rev. J. McCaffrey, Lynn, Mass.; Rev. Thomas A. Thompson, Lake Ely, N. S.; Rev. H. BIG WELCOME TO QUEBEC.

Elaborate Preparations Under Way for K. C. Convention.

QUEBEC, May 7.—Local councils of the Knights of Columbus are working hard under the direction of State Deputy E. P. Dussault to make the national convention of the order held in this city next August a great success. The response to the appeal for funds to carry on the work of the convention and entertain the delegates which was made recently by Mr. Dussault has been very generous. The civic authorities have placed the spacious council chamber of the City Hall at the disposal of the order for the daily sessions of the convention.

The weather conditions here during the month of August are ideal. Located upon the rock, 200 feet above the river St. Lawrence, the heat is never excessive. The cooling breezes of the St. Lawrence make it an [illegible] summer's night are a season which [illegible] Quebec's [illegible]. And in this [illegible] to [illegible] city will enjoy a privilege which few other cities have in their power [illegible].

STATE HOUSE NEWS OF REAL INTEREST TO COMMON PEOPLE

By A. POLITICAL SHARPE.

THOMAS P. RILEY.

HAVE a good look at the accompanying photograph of the biggest man in the Massachusetts Legislature. Don't smile. Of course, it's pretty hard even to think of the Massachusetts Legislature without cracking a smile. But we're serious for once, and we're not applying the word "biggest" to neighbor Riley simply because he has physical dimensions that would put a hay-scales on the ritz itself.

If you know anything at all about what has transpired on Beacon Hill during the last couple of weeks, then you know that Thomas Patrick Riley, the big fellow from Malden has been waging FOR the people and AGAINST the political machines and their first cousins, the vested interests.

Take, for instance, last Wednesday, when the income tax was debated. The man who passed away from work and went to bear Riley mentally could climb up the [illegible] wages he lost to "education" and still owe the "education" fund a lot of money. Perhaps the cost of living in Malden, and perhaps the baby does need shoes, but try to get up to the State House next Tuesday—not there by 10 a. m. for the galleries will be crowded—and hear the Malden Representative discuss the question of direct elections for United States Senators. Even [illegible] Senator Lodge could learn how your local Representative can vote. Then ask yourself how you would have voted. Bet [illegible] Riley would have voted.

He doesn't need it. Neither are we telling all the good truths about him. It would require a volume to tell just how much his presence in the legislature has meant to the plain people, especially during the last few years.

Knocks? Oh, yes; you'll hear people knocking Riley. But just as one of the [illegible] of the knockers and perhaps you'll see the marks of a machine or corporation collar.

Beal of Rockland Stood Pat.

SOMETHING was the matter with our eyes last week. Perhaps we strained them trying to see what was passing on the [illegible] of Representatives [illegible] Beal of Rockland [illegible] to the list of people [illegible] who voted for the [illegible] to [illegible] Referendum measure [illegible] March 31 and [illegible] to answer the April 21 roll call on the same measure. Judging a roll call isn't [illegible] Beal's [illegible] offense—only because the people don't make the laws.

But [illegible] Beal ought to be a State Prison offence for any one to [illegible] Referendum [illegible] Beal is one of legislative dodgers—and we're not saying that [illegible] Beal is not right—but [illegible] Referendum

Be Ready When Your Chance Comes.

Opportunity Comes to Everybody, but It Is Useless If One Is Not Prepared to Take Advantage of It.

Copyright, 1910, by the Sunday American-Journal-Examiner

GENIUSES make opportunity. But geniuses are rare. The ordinary man has to wait till it comes along, and then use it to get success, or fame, or money, or power, or whatever happens to be the object of his ambition.

You will hear a good many men say that they have waited all their lives for opportunity to knock on their doors and never heard so much as a footstep on the door-sill. But such men are only accounting for their own failures. All excuses are easy to make. The easiest of all is the excuse for failure.

In an aristocracy-ridden country like Russia opportunity is an infrequent visitor to the struggling youth. It would take the determination and the intellect of a Napoleon to break through the stone wall of class and tyranny and prejudice with which the amalgamated scoundrels that govern the country hedge themselves in.

But in any enlightened nation, whether it be a republic or a limited monarchy, the man who knows opportunity when he sees it, and WHO IS PREPARED TO MAKE USE OF IT, can never complain that he has had no chance in life.

And in this land in which we live, where a rail-splitter can become President, where an apprentice printer became a philosopher, where the son of a poverty-stricken minister rose to the control of half the transcontinental railroads, there is surely no reason to sit down and moan over the lack of chances to make use of such talents as a man may possess.

Of all the subjects upon which men think, success is perhaps the most interesting. The human mind craves success as the stomach craves food. Money success means delivery from the discomforts of poverty, from the torturing thought that dependents—wife, children, aged mother and father—will be left destitute to the mercies of a stone-hearted world when we no longer are able to provide for them.

Success in any great undertaking means the satisfaction of mastery, the gratifying knowledge that a fight has been fought and won, that because of effort and earnestness and high purpose the world has been benefited.

We are interested in the lives of the successful, in their work and in their ideas—even in minor details of their careers, which have no real bearing on what they have done.

And so it is that every man whose intellect is on a plane above the complacent mind of the burro desires success and the opportunity to win it.

Here and there and everywhere lies the opportunity waiting to be harnessed and driven. Not only once, but many times, every man passes it in the street and moves along on his way without recognizing it.

Not only once, but often, in every man's life it comes to him in recognizable form, and he is obliged to confess to himself that he is not ready for it. Why? Because he has been lazy, neglectful, devoted to pleasure, allowing his brain to go to seed for want of cultivation, throwing away his precious hours as if they were limitless as eternity.

You hear of men who suddenly leap to fame compassing in a single day, perhaps, what others have struggled for in vain for years. Some of the men who are leaders in industry and in literature to-day were unheard of yesterday. A young man who has been working in a poorly paid position in a theatrical company writes a play—an honest, homely play, picturing honest, homely conditions. The day after the play is produced he is praised in all the newspapers. The next week his picture and the story of his success are in all the magazines.

Opportunity, you say, came to him. True, but the same opportunity comes to thousands of other young men similarly situated. It happened that this particular man was ready for it. He knew that his chance would come some day. Instead of sitting down and making plaintive outcries because it was late in coming, he worked and thought by day and night making ready for its arrival.

To-day he is making a great deal of money—perhaps more than is good for his work. Envious rivals say that they wish they had his luck. He didn't have any luck. He only had the shrewdness to know that opportunity would surely visit him some day, and that it would be worth while to shut the door on it when it did come.

It is a pretty poor business organization which would be seriously injured by the death or illness of the man at its head. A concern in which every clerk is not ready to take the place of the clerk above him, in which the vice-president is not fully capable of discharging the duties of president, is in a perilous position.

In the right kind of an organization every man is equipped for the duties of three or four consecutive positions above him, so that he can stand promotion when it comes to him.

And, needless to say, it is these men who ARE promoted when changes are made. Never think that your abilities will remain undiscovered, or that because of your modesty or failure to make known what you can do less retiring men will be jumped over your head.

Personally, you can be as modest as you like, say as little as need be about what you can do. But all the time the work that you are doing will be talking for you, and it will tell your employers very plainly what kind of a man you are and how much may be expected of you if you are advanced to a better and a more responsible place.

You would not think highly of the first officer of a steamship who was not ready to go on the bridge and bring his vessel into port if anything happened to the captain. At sea it is absolutely necessary that at least two men besides the captain possess the same quality of seamanship and understand as well as he does the art of navigating the vessel and handling the crew.

On the great liners that ply between New York and Europe there are sometimes five or six of the officers who are fully qualified to command the vessel. Promotions come rapidly sometimes; sometimes a man serves for many years as a subordinate before he ever gets a command. But one thing is certain, and that is that promotion NEVER comes to the officer who has not mastered his profession and who has not proved, long before hand, that he is capable of filling a higher place than the one he has.

It is an old saying in business that a man will never get more money unless he earns it. In other words, the man who is worth to his employers just what he is getting and no more will stay in the place he occupies forever. But as soon as he can demonstrate that he is underpaid, that he is doing considerably more, and earning considerably more, than he can reasonably be expected to earn in his present place, he has a chance of getting a better one.

No promotion was ever honestly earned without plenty of hard work. The difficult thing is to CALL ATTENTION TO YOURSELF. Ordinary plodding will not do that. But extra effort, keen interest in the affairs of the concern for which you are working and determination to do a little more than your share toward making them prosper will attract attention.

The man who hires other men is looking for employes who will be able to fill high places. He cannot afford not to recognize their ability substantially when he finds them.

In this cartoon the artist pictures a soldier taking the command of an attacking party, seizing the flag and carrying it to victory. It is an illustration of an episode of battle that has been common since battles have been fought.

To the soldier in time of war opportunity comes suddenly and unexpectedly. There is glory for any man who has the courage and the cool-headedness to avail himself of it.

Most of the men who are now honored as national war heroes have risen to fame because they were ready to seize the opportunities that fell to them.

General Miles, when the Civil War broke out, was a clerk in a store; a good commercial future was before him, but he had no dream of military fame. He became a major-general before he was thirty. The fortunes of war brought him his opportunities. Determination to be ready for them enabled him to hold the very responsible posts that they brought.

Neither General Lee nor General Grant—though both were trained soldiers—believed at the outbreak of the war that at its close they would be accounted among the greatest soldiers the world had ever seen.

But in the struggle their training counted. Both sides needed great commanders. These two soldiers possessed the qualifications, and when the opportunity came they were ready.

It makes little difference how humble is the station in which a man BEGINS life if he is only determined not to stay there.

The butcher boy who has made up his mind to own his own butcher shop will own his own butcher shop in time. The chances are, furthermore, that by that time the habit of rising will be so fixed that he will not stay there, but become the owner of a packing house. Just at present this country needs a few great packers who have some purpose in life other than to profit by the needs of hungry humanity.

Let us hope that some of the boys now wearing aprons in little butcher shops will grow to the control of the industry, and besides winning fortune win a real place in the hearts of their countrymen by divesting it of greed and crooked politics and conducting it honestly, as it is possible to conduct all great industries.

The fear lest some golden opportunity, some "tide in the affairs of men, which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune," will escape, has driven many a man to attempt more than he was ready to do.

It would be foolhardy for an office boy to undertake to direct the affairs of the firm that employed him, even though some eccentric idiot in charge of things offered him a managership.

Nine-tenths of the failures among men in salaried positions are due, not to any lack of ambition, but to overeagerness; to feverish haste to accept responsibilities for which a man is not qualified.

There is no need to grasp at every opportunity. Far better it is to make ready to use one, spending years, if necessary, in the preparation. Then wait, and the opportunity will come. If it seems slow in coming, go out and find it. Perhaps the man for whom you are working has nothing better to offer you. In that case you need another employer. Find one who can promote you when you deserve promotion, who is not afraid to expand his business, if you can show him how to expand it. And if you can find no man to work for who will let you win all the success of which you are capable it is high time that you preceeded on your own account.

But wherever you are situated, whatever you are doing, BE READY TO DO BETTER.

To-day the chance may not come, nor to-morrow. It may be delayed for years. So much the better, for so much better equipped you will be when it does come. The man who mastered the transcontinental railroads in America was fifty years old before the chance came that he had so long awaited.

When it did come, he knew about railroads down to the minutest detail. The result proved that his waiting years had been spent profitably. He became the greatest railroad man that America had ever seen.

It is well enough for any man to await opportunity, but let him not await it sitting down. To a few come inherited fortunes; to none comes inherited success. Trust the opportunity. It will arrive in due time, and it will be followed by another, and another, and still another.

But unless you are ready to take advantage of it it will prove about as useful to you as the comet which will soon be swinging past the earth, or the cloud shadows which fly across the fields on a pleasant Spring day.

"Porky" is the best boxer that Boston has produced since the days of John L. He has all the ring tricks of the old timers. He can box, he can fight, he can mix it, he can stand punishment and he can hand out a wallop. Porky made a ringside debut a few months ago and created a sensation by knocking out in a few seconds a fellow who claimed to be a champion. Porky is the real thing. He has a knockout wallop in both hands. Always something doing from 3 till 11 at the old Howard.

GHOSTS IN A CRYSTAL BALL

MADAME MAETERLINCK AND THE GREAT CRYSTAL BALL IN WHICH SHE SEES HER "GHOSTS."

How Madame Maeterlinck's Strange Genius Is Stimulated by Mysticism and Crystal Gazing.

MADAME MAETERLINCK, wife of the great playwright and author, Maurice Maeterlinck, is a profound student of psychology and occultism.

To these studies she attributes much of her success in interpreting the chief roles of her famous husband's plays, such as "Pelleas et Melisande" and "The Blue Bird." He shares her ideas on these subjects.

Madame Maeterlinck is especially an adept in crystal gazing. She has a great crystal globe into which she looks steadily, and she sees many wonderful things therein. She says that she knows what is happening in other lands. She peers into the past and sees the ghosts of the great dead.

No one but her husband ever knows these secrets, and she has no secrets from him, for the two live like one person, thinking upon the same lines and being, as Madame Maeterlinck expresses it, "in exactly the same vibration, and therefore in perfect harmony and accord." She says that the reason many marriages are not happy and that so many divorces occur is that the two people have different rates of vibrations and that they thus jar upon each other. Vibrations must be of the same rate or no harmony can exist. She says that the vibrations can be trained to fit each other by breathing exercises for perfect relaxation of the nerves.

When the Maeterlincks were first married they had many a jar. They vexed each other and appeared to be quite unadjusted. They are both of highly-strung temperaments, and were constantly in hot water. Madame Maeterlinck was Georgette Leblanc, a Parisian actress of prominence, before her marriage. She decided to change matters. Having read some occult books on self-knowledge and self-mastering, she started out to follow the directions given, and then she told her husband. Both set about the study of the inner self deep earnest, with the result that they found out some precious secrets, and became greater artists than they had ever been before.

In Madame Maeterlinck's eyes is a look that is seen only in the eyes of those who have been permitted to gaze into the occult realms. It is look of trance-like ecstasy. It may be observed very plainly in a photograph of her with the crystal globe. This look sometimes is seen in the eyes of Professor William James and other great scientists of psychology. It is never seen in the common every-day eye.

Madame Maeterlinck is a Buddhist, a devout student of Vedanta and Theosophy. She spends hours poring over the books of the ancient Vedas, the Upanishads and the Bhaganad Ghita. She is a profound believer in reincarnation, and says that she knows who she was in her previous live.

Madame Maeterlinck says that the ancient Greek dictum "Know thyself" is the concentrated essence of all the wisdom of the world. To know one's self is the secret of all success, all power, all wealth, all genius. But by the self is not meant the objective self, the ego, but the subjective or subliminal self, which is the real self. One knows that inward self perfectly and fatally one has the secret key to everything, for everything that man has ever done in all the past in any line of effort is in every one in embryo.

Madame Maeterlinck is a great actress and a great writer, and she has a superb voice fit to grace the opera, but she cannot follow to many lives of genius, so she concentrates her force upon the one art, that of acting. She is constantly winning greater success, which she explains the fact that she is constantly coming to know more and more of her true self.

ASTONISHING DISCOVERIES ABOUT YOUR BLOOD

Professor Reichert's Experiments With Blood Crystals, Which Show the Orang-Outang Related to the White, the Gorilla to the Black, the Seal to the Bear, Seem to Prove Evolution, and May Revolutionize Murder Trials.

THE CHARACTERISTIC CRYSTAL OF THE WHITE MAN'S BLOOD.

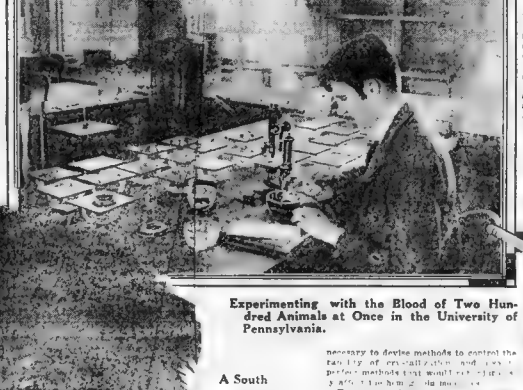
DR. EDWARD TYSON Reichert, of the University of Pennsylvania, has invented a new method whereby he classifies and identifies the blood crystals of every living animal. He has examined the blood crystals of 2,000 creatures, having their blood without killing them, and has prepared very interesting microphotographs of all of them.

These photographs illustrate and prove the theory of evolution, and are valuable for many other reasons. They show the relationship of man to the ape to the lemur, and the little animal which is a connecting link between man and the ape, and the relationship of the lemur to the lower animals, down to the lowest, including the crab.

These photographs show, among many other things, a close resemblance of the blood crystals of the human race to those of that proud beast, the orang-outang. The blood crystals of the negro are closely allied to those of the malignant African anthropoid ape, the gorilla.

The crystals of man are light, regular and slender, and those of the animals tend toward the same form. The crystals of the negro are heavier and thicker, and those of the ape are heavier still.

The relationship between closely allied animals is also shown. It can be told at once that the blood crystals prepared by Dr. Reichert from the domestic cat is a close relation of the mountain lion. It is very curious to note the relationship between the horse and the zebra. The crystals of the latter being heavier, much like the lemur, than those of the former. Much of the crystal of the zebra is of the appearance as those of the negro. The blood of the ground squirrel, which has a bad reputation for carrying the bubonic plague in America, is perhaps the most extraordinary of all in form.



Experimenting with the Blood of Two Hundred Animals at Once in the University of Pennsylvania.

The new system of testing and preparing blood will be particularly useful in criminal cases. It will enable the prosecuting authorities to tell not only whether a blood stain is human, but whether it is that of a man or a woman, that of a white or a colored person, and

The corpuscles in human blood are of two chief kinds, the red and the white. The red corpuscles are much more numerous than the white, averaging in man 4,000,000 per cubic millimetre, or 400 to 500 red to each white corpuscle.

The methods of preparing blood specimens for study are many, and for general purposes the proceeding practiced by every school boy in preparing objects for study under the microscope will serve for the examination of blood crystals, but Dr. Reichert, having evolved a theory entirely new, required the services of an expert in the study of crystals under the lens and associated Amos Peaslee Brown, Ph. D. Professor of Mineralogy and Geology in the University of Pennsylvania, with him in the work. This particular and highly specialized work is called crystallography, a science apart from the special work of Dr. Reichert.

The extreme solubility of the specimen compelled Dr. Reichert and Professor Brown to conduct their experiments during the cooler months of the year, and much of the work was done at temperature at or near the freezing point. To accomplish these marvelous results it was necessary to devise methods to control the rapidity of crystallization and [illegible] perfect methods that would [illegible]

To [illegible] Dr. Reichert has [illegible] Professor Brown that it was quite possible for them to promote or retard crystallization at will. By promoting crystallization they obtained crystals from small quantities of blood in which, on account of their rapid crystallization, [illegible] heretofore been impossible, or at least exceedingly difficult, to develop them.

D., of the Department of Geology and Mineralogy, in the University of Pennsylvania, and then made permanent by means of the [illegible] process. With the different [illegible] from specimens of color, [illegible] and [illegible] Jew.

The blood of all the vertebrates [illegible] but that of the lower animals [illegible]

While it is true that no man has actually "blue blood," it can be shown that the blood of the negro is [illegible] that he had distant ancestors [illegible] blood of that color and others with blood of other colors.

The "yellow streak," said to be present in Mr. Jack Johnson by some critics, may have its origin in the mutanga, a sea urchin with yellow blood, just as the blue blood of Mr. Anthony Drexel Biddle, who recently sparred three rounds with the colored champion, may have its origin in the horseshoe crab.

Green, violet, purple, madder, mahogany, brown, Indian-blue and lilac blood have been found in the lower animals. It is possible that there will be less [illegible] of blue blood when it becomes [illegible] that blue blood has been found in a vertebrate, although it is common in lobsters of the decapod variety and in some crabs.

It is an interesting fact that red blood and blue blood are never present in the same body. The blood of the scorpions is rich in [illegible] while the fins of the [illegible] are a pale yellow. In no instance has it been found that both hemoglobin and hemocyanin were contained in the same tissue.

The microscope, the acid test and the camera all prove that blue blood and red blood [illegible]

The Nemertinea, the Sipunculoids and the Ostracods, the Cladocera and the Phyllopoda have good red blood.

Dr. Reichert has discovered much that is useful in proving the evolutionary theories of Lamarck and Haeckel. Neither Darwin nor Haeckel could produce pictures and actual specimens under the glass with which to demonstrate the close relationship between the lemur, the monkey, the ape, the baboon, the negro and [illegible] Dr. Reichert has [illegible] It [illegible] solve the question of the connecting animal [illegible] and the [illegible] who can speak real [illegible] even to identify the blood of one man from that of another.

In a thousand courts eminent experts have testified that no man could tell the difference between the specimens of human blood. Now it will be quite possible. The expert will be able to say that a garment or a weapon or a garment is or is not that of the murdered person, provided he has an unquestioned specimen of the victim's blood with which to compare the disputed specimen. He will even be able to tell whether or not it is the blood of the accused left in some telltale place.

The microphotographs will show the blood crystals so clearly that the jury will be able to understand at once the [illegible] and form an intelligent opinion on them.

The demonstration of the doctrine of [illegible] will [illegible] the [illegible] and the [illegible] animals. The new method has led to many [illegible] as proved by the remarkable discoveries of Dr. Reichert. Some theories advanced by geologists recently have been confirmed by these researches.

In [illegible] instance, the old method of comparing [illegible] to the door, foxes and wolves. Dr. Reichert has found by the blood test that the bear is more nearly related to the seal, and has nothing in common with the dog, fox or wolf.

Over one-twelfth of a living body is blood. Nature provides blood or a fluid similar to it to [illegible] oxygen to every part of every living thing and so carry away the carbonic acid gas generated by the use of blood or its substitute.

The green coloring matter found in trees is called chlorophyll, and the red [illegible] in other [illegible] blood, [illegible] gallin. They have a [illegible] and their functions are the same. Intimate Details of Lady Duff-Gordon's Methods of Art Gown Creation--The Unique Stage Just Like a Theatre and the Pretty Living Mannequins.

"Ten parties and all the details of a society woman's life are reproduced on the stage for the benefit of society, which sits and looks on."

ANY number of persons have been wondering how Lady Duff-Gordon, the famous "Lucile" of London and New York and foremost creator of fashion in the world, goes about dressing the "400 of New York." What, for instance, does Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt or Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish see when she enters the doors of the big old brownstone house at No. 15 West Thirty-sixth street, and what surprises await them?

WHAT MARK TWAIN REALLY THOUGHT.

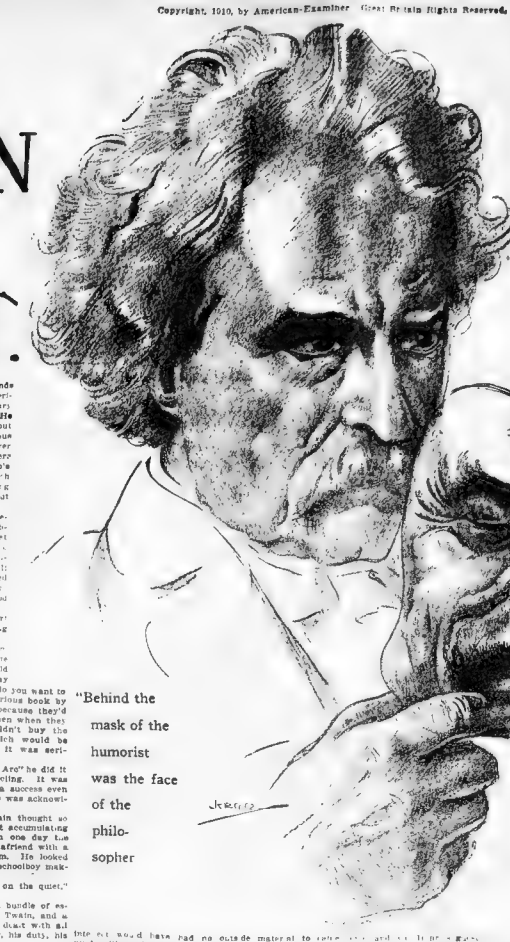
How America's Greatest Humorist, Forbidden by His Friends and Business Associates Ever to Be Serious, Secretly Printed What He Believed to Be His Solemn Conclusions upon Life—and Had to Wait Until He Died to Have the World Know Them.

"Your mind is merely a machine—nothing more. It is worked entirely from the outside."

"If Shakespeare had been born and bred on a barren and unvisited rock . . . he would have produced nothing."

"Alexander Hamilton was high-principled—but in deference to public opinion he fought a duel."

"In America, if you know which party collar a voter wears, you know what his associations are."



"Behind the mask of the humorist was the face of the philosopher

MARK TWAIN'S closest friends know that greatest of American humorists and literary men longed to be taken seriously. He wanted to write serious books about what he thought were the serious things of life. He loved Tom Sawyer and "Huck" Finn and Colonel Sellers and all the rest of the quaint, lovable characters he created, but he would much rather have been telling what he called "the truth about [illegible]."

[illegible] comedian weeps in secret [illegible] that a foolish public will [illegible] play Hamlet; most [illegible] when ten clever, satirical [illegible] marching Alexander [illegible] how they could marshall; [illegible] who could have lightened [illegible] a bit with a laugh; [illegible] heard spoils yards of good [illegible] with tragic doubts.

Down in his secret heart Mr. Twain had a constant yearning [illegible].

The publishers wouldn't let him. [illegible] dared raise Cain if I wrote [illegible] I wanted to," he once told [illegible] the artist. "They say [illegible] fine in your line. What do you want to [illegible] for? If we published a serious book by [illegible] lot of people would buy it because they'd [illegible] that it was going to be funny. Then when they found it wasn't funny they wouldn't buy the [illegible] book you put out, and which would be [illegible] because they would think it was serious."

When Mark Twain issued Joan of Arc" he did it [illegible] unwisely, so strong was this feeling. It was [illegible] when it was seen that it was a success even [illegible] that his authorship was acknowledged.

Yet all those thoughts Mark Twain thought so serious did not destroy. He kept accumulating them for twenty-seven years. Then one day [illegible] great man, tiptoed into the home of [illegible] with a bundle of manuscript under [illegible] arm. He looked as guilty and self-conscious as any schoolboy making [illegible] first speech.

"I'm going to have 'em published on the quiet," he whispered.

They were his serious thoughts, a bundle of essays between an old man, who was Twain, and a young [illegible], who is any one. They dealt with all the [illegible] of man, [illegible] responsibility, his duty, his [illegible] to his fellows, and swearing every one to secrecy, Mark [illegible] carried them to the office of a printing house employe and the [illegible] Press, of New York, struck off [illegible] copies for the author. There was not a line of [illegible] a book to suggest it was a real author publishing [illegible] printing house people were pledged. He [illegible] his book "What Is Man?"

Mr. Twain took his two hundred and fifty copies and, like a boy who had done something he long had wanted to, and that he felt sure he would be scolded for, he sent a copy to those dear to him. The first copy went to H. H. Rogers, who was his closest friend. To each of the recipients he repeated the caution.

"This book represents what I really think. But I don't want you to tell a soul that I wrote it until I'm dead. It must not be acknowledged a book, nor placed in any edition of my books until I'm buried. I suppose I will make a lot of people mad, but then I'll be [illegible]."

Humor and Melancholy Mixed.

Mr. Twain's wish was fulfilled to the [illegible] that his great mind has passed, there [illegible] any reason to keep the secret. [illegible] of Mark Twain's books, once said that [illegible] was tinged with a vein of [illegible] quite true. It was what made [illegible] same way, what he intended to be [illegible] by serious is [illegible] by touches of [illegible].

When Mark Twain was at his funnie[illegible] people have felt the tear behind the laugh. And [illegible] I say he didn't mean it, when he is at his most serious, there is a laugh lurking behind each [illegible] tentious sentence.

Author of "Comet Lore."

HALLEY'S comet, one of the most interesting celestial phenomena of all time, is now visible to the naked eye just before dawn and is rapidly approaching the point where it will reach its nearest point to the earth.

On May 18 we shall sweep through the comet's tail, which is now estimated to be 50,000,000 miles long. Although the tail contains cyanogen, the essential element of prussic acid, astronomers assure us that the atmosphere will keep most of it away from us.

The tail is composed of gas so tremendously thin that a million miles of it would weigh no more than the air in a child's balloon, and we can see the stars through it more easily than through the slightest layer of fog.

On May 30 the head of the comet will pass through the earth's orbit, and although we shall then have left that point, it points to the probability that we shall one day collide with a comet's nucleus. What will happen then? Upon this page Professor Garrett P. Servis gives the most advanced ideas upon the subject, and there is also discussed the strange psychological effects which follow a comet's appearance.

COMPARATIVE SIZES OF HALLEY'S COMET'S HEAD AND MOONS ORBIT AND EARTH.

FROM time immemorial the appearance of comets has been associated with death, madness and disaster, and however the astronomers may reassure us about Halley's comet, now to be seen in the sky, it is still interesting to note that the sentiment of fear caused by it is far from eradicated from the human mind.

Only lately Mme. de Thebes, the French prophetess, who foretold the coming of the Paris floods, and is credited with many other remarkable achievements, predicted that the return of Halley's comet this year would be followed by an epidemic of suicides and crimes.

These are the exact words of her prophesy.

"Our earth is under a terrific strain from comets. Terrible changes are imminent. The coming of a comet is affecting us for the worse. The strain of the stars will be most severely felt in America."

The first victim to fulfill Mme. de Thebes's prophesy was Adam Toth, a wealthy landowner in the district of Szasd, in Hungary, who, because of Halley's comet, the other day cut his own throat. In a slip of paper left by the suicide he avowed that he had killed himself solely because of his fear of the comet.

The Russian Government has sent instructions to officials in distant parts of the empire to tell the peasants not to be alarmed about the comet.

The British Consul in Shanghai and other Chinese cities have taken steps to explain the nature of the comet to the ignorant Chinese, in order to prevent the occurrence of Boxer uprisings.

Many famous men in history have committed suicide on the appearance of a comet, too easily driven thereto by the idea that the Celestial phenomenon was an omen of death to them. It was the operation of what psychologists would call the power of suggestion. Shakespeare expresses the ancient belief when he makes Calpurnia say to Julius Cæsar:

"When beggars die, there are no comets seen. The heavens themselves blaze forth the death of princes."

Hannibal, the great captain of Carthage, before whom all Rome trembled in antiquity, had been raised by his father, Hamilcar, to stand in great dread of comets. Comets preceded Hannibal's most signal defeats, and each of the great disasters that befell his city, Carthage, down to its fall. At the very time when the Romans were storming the great African city and burning it to the ground, a great comet was fiercely burning overhead.

Before this happened Hannibal had fled to Asia Minor. There an astrologer prophesied his death from the coming of a comet. This so wrought on Hannibal's spirit that when the comet appeared in the heavens, "shining with a horrible lustre," Hannibal took poison and died.

Another famous case of a suicide because of a comet was that of Mithridates, King of Pontus, who gave almost as much trouble to the Romans as Hannibal.

There are other instances of great rulers who were so deeply affected in their minds by the coming of comets that they either died of fear or abdicated their thrones.

When the Emperor Charlemagne was at the height of his power a comet, shaped like a torch, appeared in the heavens. The monk Ezard tells in his chronicle of that time how the Emperor summoned him before his throne and expressed his profound conviction that he was about to die. Ezard tried to make light of the Emperor's fears, and cited a text from Isaiah, bidding the Jews not to believe in the signs of the heathen. But Charlemagne reproved him, saying that he had reason to thank God for having sent him a timely warning of his impending death. Thereupon the Emperor, who up to that day had been in the best of health and vigor, made his testament and divided the Frankish Empire among his successors. This done he took to his bed and shortly afterward died.

Louis the Debonair, one of the early kings of France died in a similar manner from fear of the comet identified as Halley's comet.

Six centuries later another great monarch Emperor Charles the Fifth of Germany and the First of Spain, who first could boast that "the sun never set on his dominions," was mentally so upset by the coming of the great comet of 1556 that he gave up his royal crown of Castile and his imperial sceptre of Rome and entered the monastery of St. Just as a monk.

It is a most significant fact that Dr. Ambroise Pare, "the father of French surgery," recorded of this same comet that it was "so dreadful of aspect, and produced such terror among the common people that many died of fear, and many others fell sick."

Dr. Pare himself appears to have come under the spell of this fear, judging from his awestruck description of this comet:

"Its tail was of excessive length, and was of the color of blood. At its head was seen the figure of a bent arm, holding in its hand a great sword as if about to strike. At the end of the point there were three stars. On both sides of the rays of this comet were seen a great number of axes, knives and blood-colored swords, among which were a great number of hideous human faces with beards and bristling hair."

Dr. Pare added that it was his belief, in view of the excessive mortality caused by this comet, that the plagues of former times were to be attributed to the influences of comets.

That this famous early surgeon should have been capable of seeing "axes, knives, blood-colored swords and bristling faces" in a comet, can only be explained nowadays by the hallucinations of fear.

A comet "of fearsome aspect" is recorded in connection with the great "Black Plague," which swept from the Orient all over Europe and Asia in 1305, and again "a monstrous, horrible comet" is recorded in connection with the "Black Death" in 1347, when twenty-five million stricken people died in Europe.

We now know that these medieval pestilences were the bubonic plague, cholera and smallpox. Fear and we also know that fear is one of the most aggravating complications that can beset a patient with one of these epidemic diseases. Fear affects the inner organs, especially the heart, stomach and bowels, and once these organs are affected, at a time when cholera or bubonic plague are abroad, it is only a question of time before the disease bacilli have their undisputed sway.

Only recently we have had another instance of this same kind of unreasoning fear at our own doors. This was when the first comet of 1910 made its appearance in Mexico. Immediately the simple-minded peons of Mexico were so seized with fear that many thousands of them set out on a holy pilgrimage over the mountains to the shrine of Taipa, near Guadalajara, many hundreds of miles away. Had there happened to be another epidemic of yellow fever at the same time in Mexico, many of these fear-stricken pilgrims doubtless would have been the first to succumb.

But the subjective emotions experienced under the influence of comets are not the same in all human beings. While some men are stricken with fear at the appearance of a comet, as shown above, others are impelled thereby to fierce deeds of bloodshed and war.

Hence, so it is reasoned, all those great wars which almost invariably followed the appearance of comets. There are, for instance, in modern times, our own Civil War, which was ushered in by two successive comets of unusual lustre. The Crimean War, Indian Mutiny, the Napoleonic wars, the great Seven Years War, and the dreadful Thirty Years War, which devastated Germany and the Netherlands during the time of the Reformation, were heralded by comets.

There are innumerable instances in history of bloody riots and massacres that are known to have followed close upon the heels of comets. The massacre of the innocents ordered by King Herod of Judea about the time of the birth of Christ was first suggested to that King by the appearance of the comet now known as Halleys.

Mahomet's first massacre of 700 Jews in Arabia was directly inspired, so he preached in a Holy Jehad, by the appearance of the comet of 624 A. D.

William the Conqueror hailed Halley's comet of 1066 as his special of victory, and had the priests and monks accompanying his army of invasion preach inspiring sermons about the "heavenly sign of the comet" when he crossed with his Normans over into England.

Why Psychology Watches the Comet.

By DAVID EDGAR RICE, of Columbia University.

IN spite of assurances by astronomers that the comet is harmless and notwithstanding the fact that comets have been coming our way at frequent intervals for some thousands of years without causing us serious inconvenience, we find that there is almost universally prevalent a feeling of anxiety and apprehension at the expected visit. Among more intelligent individuals this feeling takes the harmless form of pleasant speculation as to what would happen if the comet's tail should actually envelop the earth with its deadly gases.

On the other hand among the more credulous and ignorant, especially among the peasants of European countries, the feeling is one of real terror. In such cases it is not what we are accustomed to call an intelligent fear, based on a calm estimate of possible danger, but rather a vague, ill-defined physical sense of uneasiness, which in its extreme form results in panic. In Russia, for example, this apprehension has already assumed such serious proportions that the government has found it necessary to direct public officials to take especial precautions to hold it in check.

This fear of the supernatural, or to use a more exact term, the unfamiliar, is one of the very strongest of our inherited racial instincts, and is therefore as incapable of complete eradication as the involuntary tendency to wink the eyelid at the close approach of a threatening object. It has its root in the profound ignorance of primitive man, and in the belief which grew directly out of this ignorance, that all nature was animated with powerful and malign spirits, whose chief delight lay in bringing misfortune to human beings.

This belief was the natural result of man's comparatively helpless situation in the primitive world. Without sufficient intelligence to provide adequately for his protection, he found himself the plaything of irresistible forces of nature—cold and heat, wind, rain, lightning, mountain torrents, and the ocean's waves. Unfamiliar with the exercise of physical force apart from mind, it was but natural that some intelligent spirit should be associated with all these elements. Celestial bodies in particular, by reason of their magnitude and brightness, held the chief place in these superstitions, and thus we find them closely associated with all forms of primitive worship.

The development of intelligence has given a different conception of the part played in nature by the various physical forces, but the instinctive emotion of fear persists. We still can vaguely imagine the existence of an unseen world, peopled with ghosts and goblins, genii and fairies.

WHY Halley's Comet Cannot Strike the Earth, Although Some Comet Will Certainly Hit Us Some Time—and What Will Happen Then.

By Prof. Garrett P Serviss.

HALLEY'S comet is not going to hit us; it is simply going to switch the end of its tail across the earth on the night of May 18, and astronomers are in accord in assuring the public that nothing serious will happen in consequence of this encounter between our globe and a misty stream of gas and dust flying through space.

But there are comets much larger and more massive than Halley's, and it has been demonstrated by the law of probabilities that some time or other a comet will strike the earth, coming perhaps head on. Now, the question is: What will happen when that inevitable collision occurs?

The answer must depend upon the size and mass of the comet, as well as upon its physical constitution. Most comets are small, and their heads are not solid, but consist of swarms of bodies of the size of meteors. Even one of these comets, striking the earth a direct blow, would probably cause a great disaster. Most of its material might be consumed in the atmosphere by the heat instantly generated by the swift rush through the air, but some of the larger and heavier fragments would probably get through the air and descend with frightful velocity upon the surface of the earth.

The air would be filled with flying balls of fire, and those which struck the ground would demolish everything in the immediate neighborhood

Where great masses struck they, as well as the rocks upon which they descended, would be melted by the heat They would come with a velocity far exceeding that of the swiftest cannon ball, and if they were as much as a ton in weight they would plunge several yards into the soil, crashing through the rocks and setting the very earth around them afire

Such would be the consequences of a collision with an ordinary comet. Halley's comet, being considerably more than an ordinary one, would produce, by the direct impact of its head, similar results on a larger scale

The last brilliant comet that visited the earth, that of 1882, had a head of 200,000 miles, a tail 100,000,000 miles long, having a spread at its end of 20,000,000 miles The bulk of this comet exceeded that of the sun more than 8,000 times, and the sun is more than a million times larger than the earth

Halley's comet is not quite as big as the comet of 1882, but two months ago, before it became as active as it is now, the head was 200,000 miles across. On February 14, Professor Barnard measured its tail to be 15,000,000 miles long, and that was over two months before perihelion. To-day the comet has a tail at least double that length

We do not know the diameter of the head or nucleus of Halley's comet, but the densest part of it may safely be assumed to have a diameter of at least 100 miles, and it may be 500 miles. Suppose we put it at 250 miles, equal to the air line distance from New York to Pittsburg, Pa., or Augusta, Me. If that were its precise diameter, and if it were circular, and if it struck vertically in the centre of the Mohawk Valley, it would spread destruction over the whole State of New York as far west as Seneca Lake. New York City would be on one edge of the smitten region, and the St. Lawrence river on the opposite edge. Half of Connecticut and Massachusetts and two-thirds of Vermont would be involved in the hail of fire.

Now, a small estimate of the weight of a comet of the dimensions just described would be a million million tons. Such a mass, moving forty miles per second, would possess a striking energy of about 2,000 millions of millions of millions horse-power. This means a force three hundred million million times as great as that exerted by the engines of the Lusitania, the most powerful engines in existence.

In the form of heat it would develop about 9,500 millions of millions of millions of calories—a calory being the quantity of heat required to raise the temperature of one kilogram of water (something over two pounds) one degree centigrade (one and eight-tenths degrees Fahrenheit). Where the mass struck the very rock would be not only melted, but turned into blazing vapor.

So much for a comparatively small comet Now suppose that it were a really great comet which struck the earth head on. A comet was seen in 1811 which had a head more than a million miles in diameter, but apparently the more solid part of this immense head was only about 500 miles in diameter. Donati's comet, seen in 1858, had, according to Chambers, a nucleus 5,600 miles in diameter. The same authority gives the diameter of the head of the third comet of 1843 as 8,000 miles. Just how much of this approached to the solid state we do not know. But if it were composed of fragments widely scattered their combined weight would be thousands of times greater than that of the comet which we have used as an illustration above. Such a comet striking us would probably produce an almost universal disaster. At least half of the whole continent would be, in one way or another, involved in the wreck produced.

It is not easy to make an imaginary picture of the consequences that would flow from the impact of a mighty comet's head with the earth. If such a thing should occur astronomers would be able to predict the moment of the collision a long time in advance, and also the point on the earth where the impact would probably take place. If the comet were coming straight toward the earth out of the midnight sky it would have a velocity of more than twenty five miles per second, so that it would come from the distance of the moon in less than two and three-quarters hours. Although [illegible] time for preparation [illegible] would it be possible to make? There would [illegible] we should have to face the con[illegible], whatever they were Nothing that we could do could turn the terrible missile aside, or in the slightest degree affect its motion

When it struck the upper limits of the atmosphere the fiery spectacle would begin That might be at an elevation of 200 miles above sea [illegible] The upper air would seem to take fire, and the conflagration would spread on all sides at the speed of light. No sound would reach us, for the terrible light would outdistance the waves of sound. In eight seconds after it struck the surface of the atmosphere it would be upon us! The air would be sucked up in awful tornadoes in an instant everything would be [illegible] and then would come the fearful shock, and all would be over! There would be no physical sufferings, for there would not be time for that. Fear would produce a universal paralysis and thousands would be practically dead before the blow fell

If the fragments of the comet were very massive and thickly distributed, they would beat down buildings, bridges, churches, involving them all in one universal ruin of fire and destruction. Then a mighty flame would arise, a billowing mass of smoke, vapors and burning dust, the foundations of the globe would seem to have dissolved, and over a space which might cover thousands of square miles of territory the scene would be like that which would be produced if a thousand terrific volcanoes had burst out simultaneously into the most furious eruption.

Let some eye look upon the scene of the calamity after it had passed, and where great cities and beautiful villages and broad cultivated fields, and rivers filled with shipping, and hills covered with verdure and nodding forests had been it would behold only a smoking, universal wreck.

We can get a slight idea of what the consequences of the impact of a vast mass with the earth would be from what is believed to have happened long ago in the State of Arizona. There, at a place called the Canyon Diablo, a hole a thousand feet deep and three-quarters of a mile across, appears to have been torn through the solid rock by a great meteor which in some past age struck nearly perpendicularly. A ring of rock hundreds of feet in height was thrown up around the place where the missile struck, and fragments were scattered miles around Yet it is not thought that the meteor which produced this terrible effect had a diameter of more than 500 feet at the most. Suppose a thousand, or a hundred thousand such bodies, constituting the head of a great comet, to strike like a shower of shot covering an area of hundreds or thousands of square miles! The earth would be like the head of a squirrel struck by a charge from a sportsman's gun—only in this case the missiles would come so swiftly that upon hitting their mark they would burst into fire.

It remains to say a word about the encounters of the earth with their tails. The present expected meeting with the tail of Halley's comet is not an altogether unparalleled experience, although it is very rare. In 1861 the earth is believed to have passed through the tail of a comet very much as it is now expected to do, but nobody was warned in advance, as on this occasion, so that a proper outlook was not kept. But on the night when it happened many persons noticed a curious light in the sky, and this is now thought to have been produced by the gas or dust of the comet's tail. There were no disastrous consequences of any kind. This time careful watch will be kept for any electrical effects in the air.

But if a comet's tail should happen to be frisked over the earth very close to the head, where it is relatively dense, it is possible that enough gas and dust would be introduced into the air to produce noticeable effects, especially if they were of a deleterious nature. The tails of comets apparently consist of what are called hydro-carbon gases, such as acetylene, cyanogen and coal gas, and the introduction of too great a quantity of these substances into the atmosphere might have consequences that would not be very agreeable. But the air is a great diluent for such things

Why It Incessantly Loses Its Tail.

THE nature of a comet is one of the most puzzling problems that science has to wrestle with. It is like radium, which in so many ways contradicts the hitherto accepted laws of science.

For instance, the comet is constantly losing its tail, but is never without one and yet apparently never grows any smaller.

The comet's tail is always turned away from the sun. The tail is not like smoke left behind by a locomotive, for after the comet passes the sun the tail goes ahead of the comet. From this it is clear that the tail is not a rigid appendage firmly fixed to the comet's head. So quickly does the tail rush around when the comet rounds the sun that we can assume only that the tail is continuously formed anew—a new tail not only every day, but every instant.

The old material that had formed the tail yesterday is left behind in space. As a result of this continuous throwing off of matter we should expect comets to grow smaller, according to the accepted laws of science. But we have records of Halley's comet for more than two thousand years and still it continues to shine with undiminished tail

Why does the comet's tail run away from the sun, when the attraction of the sun is the greatest force in the solar system? The only explanation of this is that the repellent force of the light of the sun is greater than the attraction exercised by it. It has been proved by experiments recently that light has a push

When the particles of matter are decreased in size the pressure of light becomes greater in proportion to their weight, until a point a last is reached when that pressure becomes strong enough to overcome the attraction of gravitation.

It is therefore believed that the comet's tail is composed of particles so minute that the sun's light pressure exceeds its power of attraction by gravitation. The force of gravitation is still pulling on the comet's tail, but the light pressure overcomes it.

We know how thin a comet's tail is because we can see the stars shining through it with undimmed lustre

Some persons who are unfamiliar with astronomy may ask how it is that a thing so light can move as a whole and not be blown to pieces? They forget that there are no winds in celestial space to blow the comet, nor is there any air to retard its progress. In a vacuum a feather would fall to the earth as quickly as a lead ball.

As far as we know there is an absolute vacuum in interstellar space and the comet, which may weigh a million times less than a feather in proportion to its size, moves around the sun in obedience to the law of gravitation, even those particles which are so minute that they are repelled by light

It is possible that the particles repelled by light, at a certain distance from the comet's head, having increased their size, the power of gravity upon them becomes greater than the pressure of light and draws them back to the comet's head

How I Furnished My House with a $25. Work Bench

My Cartwheel Chandelier, My Home-Made Settle-Table and the Seats Cut Out of Common Onion Boxes.

The best thing about a workbench either spoke. There is only one drop cock and the advantage is that it is the for each branch, so that if you get any thing of homemade gives—you of the top lights you have to light at the way through the can have just what you want, and four jets, as all four are fed from for the right, for there is a single gas pipe. This is no disadvantage because you can always use the drop imp you want a little or a considerable

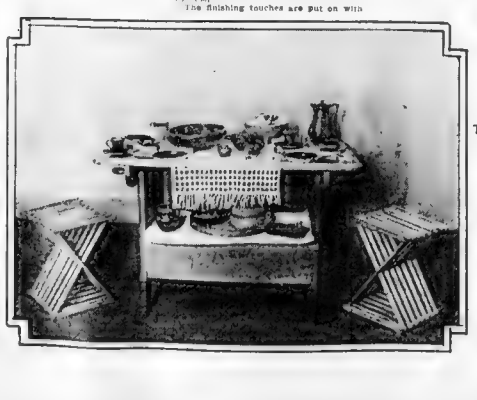
Making the Quaint Settle-Bench.



The Settle-Table Dressed with Yellow China and the Onion Box Seats Completed.

While casting about for something that would go with the onion-box dining settle and the homemade settle table I thought of a cart wheel. This would go with anything. My plan was to suspend the wheel from the ceiling and have upright gas jets at every other spoke, with a drop light underneath. The stop cocks could be so arranged that we could burn the top lights and the drop light together or separately.

Of course, I wanted to buy the tongs necessary for cutting the gas pipe and for making the threads for the joints, but I found a good plumber who was willing to do it for me for a small consideration. The next thing to do was to find a wheel of suitable size and light weight. I commissioned my "Waterloo" to find me one, but he protested that wheels were sold only in sets of two. But the next day he reported that he had espied a single wheel hung over a wheelwright's shop for a sign, which, he had learned, the wheelwright was willing to part with cheaply, because "the strength was out of it." We both went to take a look at the wheel where it hung, high in air over the wheelwright's door. It was a big red, and of good make, being a carriage wheel. One drawback was the price demanded for the wheelwright took it down for us.

We suspended the wheel from the center of the ceiling by a piece of half-inch gas pipe thirty-four inches long, using the brass fixture over the pipe to cover the hole in the ceiling. This main pipe was screwed into the center of the wheel and ran above the ceiling to the stopcock and a T-joint for the drop lamp to screw into. The under side of the T was fitted with screw holes for the lamp cord.

The drop lamp was a necessity and I have to measure and mark off the spokes for the gas pipes. Always begin with the easiest part first, measuring off two pieces of the seven-inch lumber for each end and one-half inches high. Glue the two boards together. Mark the holes for the pegs from both the top and the side edge. Bore the holes. Draw a curved line to round off the sharp corners and cut out a curve between the two peg holes, being careful to leave as much wood on all of the holes as there is on the top. Saw this piece out with a saw and sandpaper it smooth.

Make the two upright end pieces first, measuring off two pieces of the seven-inch lumber for each end and twenty-eight and one-half inches high. Glue the two boards together. Mark the holes for the pegs from both the top and the side edge. Bore the holes. Draw a curved line to round off the sharp corners and cut out a curve between the two peg holes, being careful to leave as much wood on all of the holes as there is on the top. Saw this piece out with a saw and sandpaper it smooth.

The finishing touches are put on with little pieces an inch wide and eight and a half inches high on the corners of the side uprights. This gives the base a wider foundation and improves the appearance as well. They are glued and screwed.

To finish the settle, sandpaper and either oil or stain it. I washed mine in the natural color, so I finished with a little floor wax. Whittle out pegs from small pieces which are left over. I made mine to extend three inches beyond the outside and allowed seven and a half inches for the peg part proper.

The lumber for the settle, with a top thirty-six by twenty-four, cost $1.25.

It is easy to make stools from onion crates, which cost 10 cents. All you have to do is to remove the bottom boards with a tack hammer, unbend the ends of the wires at both corners of one end of the crate and pull out the wire. Lay the short pieces to one side, turn back the long pieces which are still fastened on the other end with the original wire, thread on the outside and piece and then alternately one of the long pieces from first the right and then the left, threading a short stick between each as in the original crate.

After the strips have all been threaded, pull the wire taut with a pair of wire nippers and bend down and hammer flat so that the end will not stick out and catch ladies' dresses.

"Banker Morse is in Atlanta Jail, but his townsfolk have gagged gossip and chained her fast to his cell, so his little daughter may not know it."

WHEN Banker Charles W. Morse was sent to the Atlanta Federal Prison for fifteen years, not only in all the prodigious overturning of his affairs of himself and his wife, was left one little twelve year old daughter Anna. Little Anna, up in Bath Maine knows nothing of her father's trial, nothing of his disgrace, has not the faintest idea that he is in jail and that her stepmother is in New York working night and day to get him out. She believes that her father and Mrs Morse are having a perfectly glorious vacation down South and that next Fall the latter will return and take her back to New York.

Then with her father at liberty his daughter can be told all and have the proof before her that a great injustice had been done him and that there is nothing for her either to be sorry for or to be humiliated over.

Little Anna Morse is an exceedingly sensitive child. Knowledge of her father's imprisonment would probably kill her. It is for this alone then as much as for her health that Mrs. Morse has taken an office in New York City and is working to prevent her child from knowledge of her father's predicament. GOOD BREAKFASTS

Mme. Tetrazzini, the Distinguished Prima Donna, Gives Some Recipes from Her Cook Book.

By Mme Luisa Tetrazzini.

BREAKFAST is the problem meal, enjoyed the same "wake-me-up" coffee because it is the one meal which it with rolls, or toast or cornbread. The hardest to intelligence variety. argument against the breakfast is that Personally I prefer the European break- in Europe the first breakfast is followed fast, which is literally next to nothing. by a second in two or three hours. In In France, in Germany, in Italy I have America four or five hours elapse be- [illegible] sometimes it is a longer time [illegible] but this is one of the facts that accounts for the common [illegible] American custom, indigestion.

It is a fact, not theory, and I believe that I can produce medical authority for this, if that there are peo- some and occupations that permit one to do without breakfast. The persons who are overweight, for instance, will do well to let their first meal be luncheon. The old adage "While we sleep we eat" applies.

But for Americans the custom of breakfasting seems to be a necessity. It is then a necessity that it be a bit more substantial than the European one, for an American may perform the equivalent of Cocoa and Its Wisp of Whipped Cream.

Mme. Tetrazzini Demonstrating How to Broil Lamb Chops.

a hearty breakfast in a shorter time [illegible]

I do not like the American habit of drinking a great deal of cold water on an empty stomach. To my mind it is better to begin without food. I believe we should drink this two glassfuls of warm water containing a teaspoonful of lemon juice.

There is no exception, and I have medical [illegible] Or a number of ounces [illegible] authority for this, is that these are pec- containing if you prefer, a little [illegible] pulp, though I prefer orange juice strained. This serves both as a re- and

While in America I have learned to enjoy your substantial yet dainty breakfasts. This one I remember with great pleasure as being the one offered me by an American whose guest I was Orange Juice.

Creamed Kidneys.
Special Baked Potatoes.
Southern Corn Pone.
Coffee.

From my hostess I got this recipe for the delicious creamed kidneys.

Creamed Kidneys.

SIX veal kidneys, half pint milk, one cup of cream, one tablespoonful of flour, one teaspoonful of chopped parsley, a dash each of salt, pepper and paprika

Soak the kidneys in salt water for two to three hours. Rinse them and parboil for twenty minutes. Chop them in moderately small pieces. Place them in a saucepan. Pour the milk over them and let them come to a boil. Mix the butter and flour, and add the mixture to the kidneys. Add the seasoning, and just before serving the dish stir in the cream.

Special Baked Potatoes.

BAKE six long potatoes until light and feathery. Split them lengthwise, using a hot knife. Remove the inner part of the potato, mixing it on a plate with a little butter, a few chives and salt and pepper to taste. Place the mixture back into the potato skins and serve on hot platter.

Corn Pone.

TWO cups of yellow cornmeal, one cup [illegible] of cream, two teaspoonfuls of baking [illegible] powder, 2 cups of milk, one tablespoonful of lard, one tablespoonful of [illegible] sugar, one egg well beaten.

Beat the eggs well. Add the milk and [illegible] butter. Add the salt and baking powder to the flour and sift together. Add the milk and eggs and beat all together. Bake in a moderate oven.

Coffee, as in many other beverages, depends for its success upon the way it is prepared, as well as for the particular taste to which it is adapted. Some prefer the old-fashioned boiled coffee. My hostess was one of these, so our coffee was prepared, I learned, in the following manner

Boiled Coffee.

TWO heaping tablespoonfuls of coffee to one pint of boiling water. Place the coffee in the pot. Pour on the water and let it come again to the boiling point. Set it away from the heat and stir in two tablespoonfuls of slightly beaten egg. Let it boil for one minute. Then place it on the back of the stove, where it will [illegible] for five minutes before it is to serve.

But my [illegible] hostess, knowing that to some palates it remains irritating, the filtered coffee is more agreeable, had ordered a cup prepared [illegible] for me.

Filtered Coffee.

TWO heaping tablespoonfuls of coffee to one pint of boiling water. Use a French coffee pot. Place the coffee in a bag, pour over it the boiling water. Cover the pot and let it steep in a pot of hot water until the water that has been poured in has filtered through. Pour it out and [illegible] it through the filter again. This method is preferable for the black coffee served in small cups, demi tasse, after dinner. A few, especially we foreigners, prefer it as even for breakfast.

Another simple and delicious breakfast which I enjoyed while a guest in an American home was this:

Grape fruit.
Lamb chops.
Sally Lunns.
Cocoa.

Tomato Sauce for Chops.

TOMATOES, canned or raw, one pint one teaspoonful of chopped onions, two whole cloves, a bit of bay leaf, a sprig of parsley, one-quarter cupful of flour, one cupful butter, a pinch of pepper and a dash of salt.

Cook the onions, tomatoes, cloves and parsley for ten minutes. Mix the butter and flour, salt and pepper in a saucepan and [illegible] and pour into them the [illegible] Cook them, stirring [illegible] while until [illegible] comes to a boil. Pour while hot over the chops. Some prefer for the chops this more delicate dressing.

Butter.

ONE-HALF cupful of butter, one tablespoonful of lemon juice, one-half teaspoonful of pepper, a dash of pepper, one tablespoonful of parsley, cut very fine.

Lamb Chops.

CHOPS are delicious if cooked as follows: Be sure that the coals are glowing hot, without flame or smoke. A double broiler should be greased with beef suet. Place the chops lightly on this and hold the broiler near the coals until slowly counting ten or twelve. Turn the broiler and hold the other side near the coals for the same length of time. Continue to turn the broiler about thus, each time counting ten to twelve, until the meat is seared. Then hold it further from the fire, turning it occasionally, until the surface is well browned and [illegible] just before removing from the fire sprinkle well with salt and pepper, turning each side to the heat once more, so that the seasoning will settle well into the [illegible] and juices.

When the chops are cooked take them from the fire, lift them upon a platter, spread both sides with butter, squeeze a few drops of lemon or tomato sauce.

Sally Lunns.

ONE quart of flour, one-half teaspoonful of baking soda, one teacup of warm milk, one-half cup of warm water, one-half cup melted butter, four eggs, four tablespoonful of potatoe yeast.

Mix with the flour one teaspoonful of salt. Add the warm milk and water, and the butter, and the eggs, which has been dissolved in [illegible] water. [illegible] Let [illegible] have been beaten to a stiff froth. Stir all these to a stiff, smooth batter and add the potatoe yeast. After the yeast has been added, beat hard. Butter a pan thoroughly and set the mixture in it to rise. Keep it in a warm place until light. Bake in a slow, steady oven.

The cocoa my hostess informed me was prepared as follows:

Breakfast Cocoa.

ONE pint of scalded milk, one pint of boiling water, two tablespoonfuls of prepared cocoa, two to four tablespoonfuls of sugar, according to taste.

Mix the cocoa and sugar in a saucepan, gradually stir in the water and milk. Let it boil five minutes. Pour in the milk and cook for five minutes longer or until the mixture is smooth and loses its raw taste. Beat well with an egg-beater. This prevents the forming of an [illegible] skin over the top.

This milder cocoa can be prepared for children or for invalids.

Drink Made from Cracked Cocoa.

ONE-HALF cupful cracked cocoa (or a mixture of cocoa and cocoa shells).

Boil the cocoa and water together for from two to two and a half hours, according to whether the fire is slow or quick. Serve with a teaspoonful of milk and two or three lumps of sugar to each cup. If any is left in the pot add a little more cocoa and water each day. Boil over and over again. The leftovers can be thus used for a week, and the last cup of cocoa will be the best.

If chocolate is preferred to cocoa it can be prepared in this way:

Chocolate.

TWO squares of unsweetened chocolate, four tablespoonfuls of sugar, one cupful of boiling water, two cupfuls of scalded milk.

Cut the chocolate into bits. Place it in a saucepan and put the saucepan into hot water. When the chocolate has melted, add the sugar and water, stirring until smooth. Pour into this half of the milk. Then pour into the remaining half of the milk the choco ate mixture. Stir until it boils. Beat with an egg-beater until frothy.

Combine Health With Beauty

in your Wall Decorations—at the same time remember that you can if necessary cover your old wall paper with Alabastine if the paper is solid on the wall and is not printed with aniline dyes.

Physicians and sanitarians agree that much sickness and many contagious diseases, attributed to other causes, are due primarily to improper wall coverings. Wall papers and kalsomine are not sanitary, due largely to their mode of application as well as the materials from which they are made.

Sometimes it is necessary to leave old paper or burlap on the wall—the plaster may be loose—it may have uneven surface because of patching, rebuilding, or changing partitions. In all such cases when the paper is solid and of suitable texture (and most paper is) Alabastine can be applied over it with excellent effect. At the same time the coating of Alabastine completely destroys any noxious insects or deadly germs that may be on the papered surface.

Beautiful results and moderate cost, however, should be closely allied. Alabastine, while rich and artistic in effect, usually costs for material 3 cts. per square yard. Wall paper, including cost of applying, costs 10 cts. to 19 cts. and upwards per square yard. Oil paint costs 20 cts. per square yard. Alabastine, the perfect water color, the sanitary wall covering, with soft velvety tints is the best and most inexpensive.

Those who know most about good interior decorating use most

ALABASTINE COLOR CHART FREE

This chart is the most practical thing ever made. It shows six handsome wall and ceiling designs in actual Alabastine colors. It also shows all Alabastine colors and their myriad combinations. It also gives complete information concerning the use of Alabastine and how to have your walls decorated.

The Alabastine Color Chart will be sent FREE with the question form. Please send for it to-day. Be sure and send us your dealer's name if possible.

Alabastine is not kalsomine. Alabastine is a natural rock powdered, the rock itself is a natural cement. Alabastine becomes a part of the wall through its own cementing qualities. Kalsomine is held to the wall by animal glue, which in time decays and rubs off. Alabastine never fades.

It is a richly printed and profusely illustrated book, in colors on heavy plated paper, beautifully bound with an embossed cover in colors and contains new designs for decorating every room in the home. If you are planning decorating or re-decorating any apartments in your home, send 10 cents in silver or U. S. stamps for this useful and beautiful book. It is a complete course in wall decoration.

We will send you without charge the Alabastine Color Chart and Question Form, and will have our expert decorator supply you with full color scheme for your rooms. We will prepare for you scheme of color and stencils, and tell you what lines to buy to reproduce the effects.

SUNDAY-AMERICAN-EXAMINER PATTERNS

YOUR SELECTION OF ANY OF THESE TWO PATTERNS FOR TEN CENTS

No. 8483—Child's Rompers.

Sizes 2, 4, 6, 8 years. Requires 2½ yards of 36-inch material for the 4-year size.

These useful little garments for children are growing in popularity, and no child should be without them. These rompers may be worn by either boy or girl. They completely cover the dress, while at the same time give perfect freedom while at play. The neck may be cut square or high, finished by a narrow band. A tape or elastic inserted at the lower edge holds the fulness in place at the knee.

No. 8532—Girl's Simple Dress.

Sizes 4, 6, 8, 10 years. Requires 4 yards of 24-inch material for the 8-year size.

This attractive little model will be found very simple and practical for home making, and its laundering possibilities are apparent at a glance. It hangs straight from the shoulders and gathers at the neck in the front, giving a pretty fulness. The back is perfectly plain. Blue and white striped linen, with bands of plain linen.

No. 8671—Girl's Dress.

Sizes 1, 2, 4, 6, 8 years. Requires 2⅛ yards of 36-inch material for the 6-year size.

A pretty novelty is shown in this little girl's dress, which may be made of gingham, chambray, lawn, nainsook or batiste, or of cashmere or silk. As here shown, handkerchief linen was used, with embroidery on front panel and cuffs, and ribbon beading for decoration. The dress is made with a group of tucks over the shoulders and lengthened by a gathered flounce that is cut in one with the front panel of the dress.

No. 8709—A Charming, Simple Garment.

Sizes 2, 4, 6 years. Requires 2 yards of 36-inch material for the 6-year size.

The body and sleeve in one is a feature that has been adopted for the little girls as well as for their mothers, and in the model here shown we have a pretty dress on this order. It may be worn with or without a guimpe, and the neck edges may be cut in either of three outlines. Percale or gingham will be practical for general wear, with braid or feather stitching for a finish.

BARGAIN DAY,
Post Office Box 260,
New York City.

No. 8565—Girl's Dress.

Sizes 4, 6, 8, 10 years. Requires 2½ yards of 36-inch material for the 6-year size.

The extreme simplicity of this little dress constitutes its chief charm. White linen, trimmed with bands of pink dotted linen, was used in the construction, but piqué, chambray and gingham are all adapted to the design, trimmed with bands of insertion.

No. 8601—Girl's Pinafore Frock.

Sizes 4, 6, 8, 10 years. Requires 3¼ yards of 27-inch material for the 8-year size.

A little frock like the model in this illustration would be dainty enough for Sunday wear if made of lawn, dimity, silk or cashmere, with trimming of silk braid, lace or embroidery to suit the material; or for general wear, gingham, repp, poplin or plaid will answer nicely. The skirt may be plaited or gathered and the waist or pinafore made with rounded or pointed edges.

No. 8493—Child's Dress.

Sizes 2, 4, 6 years. Requires 2½ yards of 24-inch material for the 4-year size.

Linen, piqué, gingham, galatea and serge may all be used in the making of this simple little garment, suitable for either boy or girl. It is in double-breasted style, closing at the side.

No. 8530—Child's Overalls.

Sizes 4, 6, 8, 10 years. Requires 2½ yards of 36-inch material for the 6-year size.

These little overalls or rompers are equally suitable for boys or girls, and allow of perfect freedom of motion while at play. The garment fastens at the shoulders and is supplied with pockets enough to suit even the small boy. Usually made of denim, gingham or khaki.
